Steve,
You're a very nice guy. If it weren't for you, Government would be a snore. You're such a comedian. Good luck in everything you do.
God Bless You!

The right combination

Is school just a huge building with many students in it? Or, is it many individual elements that combine to make up a whole? Within the school exist varied and diverse activities such as math, English, and science. Then, there are sports, music, and drama. Each element contributes in its own way to the success of the school.

Putting all the pieces together to form a successful combination is hard. But with the cooperation of everyone involved, it worked out. Although not everyone took part in all the pieces, each person was needed to make Warren complete. Just like a puzzle, everything fit into its own separate groove. Homecoming was spirited. The boys' basketball team made it to Regionals, as did the girls' gymnastics team. Only at graduation did the pieces separate.

The bond that kept them together existed throughout the school year. Everything worked out. Everyone was an essential part of the school year...and we started by Piecing it Together.

Variety made it work

What is the ideal student like? It depends on the definition. For Warren Central, he was a variety of things. He made good grades, was always polite to his teachers, and friendly to classmates. He participated in school and after-school activities, as well as his social life. Perhaps he was on an athletic team, in a musical group, or in a club. Whatever he did, it formed a model for others to follow.

But, just the ideal student could not make up the school year. Variety is the spice of life, so it is said, and Warren had plenty. From swimming to science to parties, people joined to be a part of the fun. Successful combinations all merged to form one...just one of many different pieces.

Possessing the right combinations was hard. Whether the student was a loner or part of the crowd didn't matter. What matters is that without each of the pieces, qualities, and students, Warren would be just another school. But it's not. It is an ideal school...accomplished by Piecing it Together.

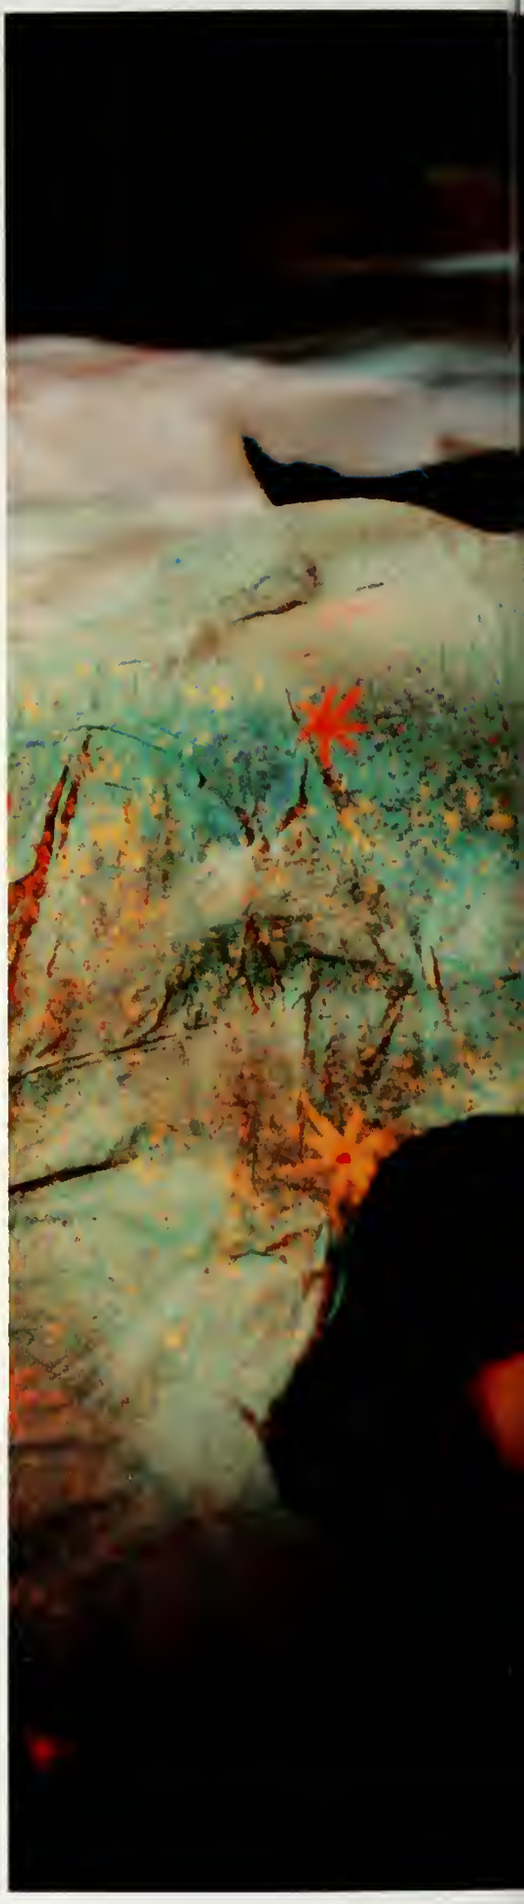
PIECE OF THE Excitement



What do students do outside of school? Surely not all of their time is spent on school activities. For every student in the school, leisure time is spent differently. Some prefer to read, some dance, and some go to concerts. Others listen to music, go out with friends, or spend time with boyfriends or girlfriends. Still others pursue part-time jobs. A few work with acting or modeling.

Leisure time is spent at school, too. Many students act in musicals and plays or participate in sports. They go to dances and shows here, or merely go to their favorite club. Whatever was done, as many hobbies exist as do students. Hobbies provided relief from the everyday pattern of school. Whether students really worked at school or just "lived for the weekend," their activities reflected their lifestyles and interests.

No matter what, different things to do existed. The end result --- fun. Each activity was a piece of students' lives and a piece of the excitement. By Jennifer Eley

Homecoming fever

"We'll 'Wipe Out' the Irish!" echoed through the halls during Homecoming week. Kicking off the week, each class decorated a hall after school. Combining the theme "Wipe Out the Irish" and the fiftieth year of Warrior football, the best-decorated hall proved to be the foyer completed by the Seniors.

Also, on Monday in the cafeteria WEDM sponsored "Puttin' On The Hits". "The student reaction was a positive one," said program manager senior Tim Colwell. "It was also a good money maker for the station." The Show Boys "sang" their way to first place.

After much hard work, Mrs. Susan Bravard's Mass Media class won the classroom door decorating contest. Hung above the foyer, club sheets added to the atmosphere with the Polar Bear club winning first place in the contest.

Wednesday, the Homelycoming Queen was crowned. In this spoof of the classic Homecoming Queen Contest, senior Henry Hernandez reigned. He said, "It was the best time I have ever had!"

Also encouraging spirit throughout the week, dress-up days added a new dimension to Homecoming, with students wearing "Beat Irish" badges on Wednesday. Throughout the day, guys and gals tried to steal these badges from one another. Finally Friday came, and students supported the football team by wearing black and gold.

Homecoming fever

Walking through the empty halls, one could hardly imagine what the day had in store. Finally, it had come. Soon the halls were filled with excitement as the count-down to homecoming began. During school, students exhibited spirit by wearing black and gold and tried to contain their enthusiasm for the upcoming game.

As the floats completed the parade route, the Future Farmers of America floated into first place. Afterwards, the Warriors "Wiped Out" the fighting Irish of Cathedral 37-7. Senior Jim Bowman said, "I wanted to get even with Cathedral for the loss last year. I think the team really came together that night." Rain didn't dampen the enthusiasm of the fans either as the Warriors rallied to victory.

Although still held during half-time the Homecoming Queen contest was slightly different. Standing close to the queen, a king proudly took his place.

Karie Hon presided as queen and Henry Hernandez became the first Warren King. The court included: Kathy Anderson, Jennifer Vaughan, Julie Armstrong, Eleanor May, Julie Burkert, Rhonda Cornelious, Tony Turner, Brett Dye, Devon Head, Rick Bacon, K.C. Pfluger, and Steve Battles.

Finally, students danced Saturday night away. Like the song "Wipe out," homecoming joined the past with the present. By Kathy Lester

Under the mistletoe

Sometimes it is hard to wait for Christmas to arrive. It seems as if it takes forever to get here. But, Christmas joy came early for Warren Central students. On December 12, 1987, the Christmas Dance was held in the foyer.

Sponsored by the Rainbow Club, the dance was even more successful than last year. Senior Tracey Hambrite, president, said, " Everybody really enjoyed it, even though we had a few problems."

Included among the problems were speaker difficulty, and sometimes equipment failure. Music was provided by WEDM, and Tower Studio took pictures in the upper hall.

Among the decorations was the traditional Christmas tree, over 25 feet tall and 15 feet wide.

Said King Rick Bacon, "I couldn't hear my name because all of Eleanor's fans were screaming. But, it was a neat feeling to know that peoople supported me."

The annual Christmas convocation was presented during activity period. Students were treated to a show put on by the six choral groups at Warren. A group of MC's put on a small skit in between performances, which told of Santa's search for his "important" papers, which were just toilet paper. The convo built up students' anticipation for the dance and the Christmas season.

Catching the spirit

What is black and gold, filled with spirit, and appears only in February? Why, Winter Homecoming, of course! In its second year, this fun-filled week spiced up the second semester and helped students to get rid of the winter blahs.

Kicking off the celebration, the Valentine's Dance was changed into a turnabout. Held in the foyer, the dance, sponsored by the cheerleaders, transformed the foyer into a romantic setting.

"The dance was great," said junior Mike Teel. "It was nice not having to worry about getting the money to go."

During the week many events were held. Not to be defeated by underclassmen, the Seniors won the spirit chain. Also, clubs designed club sheets to boost morale.

Student Council came up with a unique idea for floats. During half-time, "little red wagons" decorated by each class rolled onto the floor.

Junior Marcus Rosenau said, "It gave students a chance to have fun with floats and a chance to show their spirit and imagination."

Promoting school spirit, dress-up days gave everyone a chance to participate in the week's activities. Unique to Warren was "Mr. McNuttly Day," named after Physics teacher, Mr. Dennis McNulty, known for his ugly ties. "It was one of the biggest honors I have ever had," he said.

Thoughout the week, students showed their spirit which spilled over to the game. However, after an overtime, Lawrence North came away with a win of 68-65.

Junior Matt Abrams summed up the week by saying, "Winter Homecoming was a great way to encourage school spirit and help people to get back into things."

Now appearing...on stage

Broken toes, snagged hems, almost missed cues... all things that go ino a Warren Central fall play. Well, not always; but for the actors in this year's "Midsummer Night's Dream", these were problems to reckon with.

Once opening night problems were dealt with, a succesful show running from December the 8-10 became a reality. Directed by Mr. Thom Feit and student teacher Laurie Smith, the play was performed in the studio theatre. This was the first Shakespearean play sponsored by the Drama Department in many years.

For those who weren't quite up for that serious stuff, who were looking for something light, there was the children's play. "Winnie the Pooh" was performed in the auditorium of the PAC on December 5 and 6.

Though it was a musical version of the A.E. White children's story, no one who was a member of a choral group could be a cast member. Junior Holly Williamson said, "I was kind of disappointed that I wasn't on cast. Maybe I would have had a better chance if I weren't in Trebs."

Without choir members in the show, one would expect a small, inexperienced cast. Yet, there were many experienced people in the production. Senior Tim Hampton (Eeyore) said, "the cast worked well together, but we struggled through the singing parts. I was surprised at the experience of the cast all around. It's not usually that way for a children's play."

So, from serious to downright playful, the Drama Department delivered, covering all age groups and types for the first semester.

Touching the stars

Eighteen acts that included dancers, rappers, punk and rock bands, actors, comedians, and a "biker" took the main stage at the Performing Arts Center January 7 to show off their special talents.

This year's show had a great turnout, with both the floor and balcony sections full, even though the weather conditions were not the best.

Groups in this year's show were The Dudes, Dream Visions Syndicated, The Elect, S.O.V. (Source Of Violence), Dezire, Karie Hon, Eric Phillipe, Angela Johnson, Destiny, J.A.P.F., Russ Barlow, Tim and Darrel Hutchinson, Show Girls, The Show Boys, Rhonda and Shonna Naugle and Michelle Oliver, Indianapolis Contemporary Guitar Ensemble, Young Ones, Bill Backoff, and Craig McCormick. Some of the Mc's of this year's show were Glen Johnson, Tracy Enochs, and Kristy Feit.

"Winning our category was the greatest thrill," stated Barry Bradley who was in the group Dezire. He also commented,"We worked hard to give the audience our best show for their enjoyment." Jessica Funches, also in Dezire, stated, "Though mistakes were made, we were not condemned for our mistakes; we were rewarded for our initatives."

This year, no prizes were awarded, but winners were announced. Some of them were Destiny, Dezire, The Elect, Karie Hon, and Craig McCormick.

"I enjoyed this year's show much more than last year's because there was a bigger variety of acts. If you didn't like the one that was performing, you would probably like the next one,"commented Kathy Stephens.

Even though the show had its mishaps, it had enough of a variety of acts to please anyone who was in the audience. "I know I'll go next year if it as good as this year's," commented Treena Thomas.

Dogpatch survives

A hush fell over the stage as the lights dimmed and the curtain slowly rose. The time had come to see if all the hours of hard work had paid off. It was opening night for the spring musical "Lil' Abner."

When the curtain rose, the audience saw the semblance of the town of Dogpatch. The song "It's a Typical Day " introduced the many humorous characters.

As the play opened, Abner Yokum, Senior Jeff Gammon, was trying to keep as far away as he could from Daisy Mae, Senior Lisa Stout, so he wouldn't have to promise her that she can catch him during the annual Sadie Hawkin's Day Race.

However, their typical day soon turned upsidedown. During a town meeting, they were told that their town had been choosen to become the nation,s new nuclear testing site.

Throughtout the rest of the play, the Dogpatch citizens tried to save their beloved Dogpatch. This goal took Abner to Washington. There he met General Bullmoose who devised a plan to get Yokum's tonic, which was being tested by the government. However, his plan was discovered, and he was arrested.

In the end, Dogpatch was saved because the statue of J. T. Cornpone in the town square was declared a national monument, and Daisy and Lil' Abner finally were married.

Dogpatch survives

Different from last year's musical, "Carousel," "Lil' Abner" presented its love story in a humorous way.

"I thought that the musical was great. Everyone did very well, and some of the songs were really cute!" said junior Amy Rail.

The cast, crew, and pit orchestra brought to life the people of Dogpatch. "Lil' Abner" was a really fun musical, and the people involved in it really enjoyed doing it, " said junior Jeff Cox.

"This year's musical provided me with the opportunity to play one of my favorite roles yet, General Bullmoose. Actually, all of the characters were great. "Lil' Abner" was just plain fun!" remembered senior Tim Colwell.

However, the play also had its share of problems. During the rehearsals, the pig that senior Lisa Houtz was to carry died. Fortunately, a replacement was found in time for the performance.

Also, a more serious problem arose. On the night of the last performance, senior Tim Colwell got the chicken pox. Mr. Thom Feit, the director and drama teacher, stepped in at the last minute, providing many funny moments.

"The cast handled it all very well," said senior Scott Weishaar who attended the show that night.

"I really loved being a part of the musical," said junior Kevin Buchanan. "It was a lot of fun and a great success!"

Lasting memories

"For just one moment," Warren Central juniors and seniors were able to make a lasting memory at the 1988 Prom. Held at the Iniana Roof on Firday, April 29, the Prom was definitely a class act.

Displayed with the green and white prom colors, the setting was a mix between Spanish and Mediterranean.

At this year's prom though, Student Council members tried some new ideas. First, the price of the ticket went up to $40 per couple. Of course, the ticket also included dinner. The dinner was buffet style which included chicken normandie, roast beef, twice baked potatoes, green beans, salad and a dessert tray.

Another new idea this year was the video taping of the prom. Students were able to buy a video tape of the prom for $15.

Replacing the bands with a disc jockey was another innovation.

Activities associated with Prom this year included a Prom Fair with displays by local businesses held in the Hall of Fame two weeks before the big night, a "Better Than New" shop where used Prom dresses could be purchased, and the Post Prom Party, sponsored by the PSTA and TASK.

Toward the end of the memorable evening, Elenor May and Brett Dye were named Prom King and Queen from a court consisting of seniors Julie Armstrong, Cathy Anderson, Jennifer Kisslinger, Kari Hon, Michelle Timmie, Jeff Cheshire, Henry Hernadez, and KC Pflugar.

Honorable mention

On May 2, over 100 academic awards were presented in the Performing Arts Center at the annual Honors' Night.

The evening started with art awards and ended up with the Principal's award, presented to Joe Moody, who received a standing ovation. Other notable awards were the Presidential Academic Fitness certificates, which were signed by President Reagan, and the National Merit Scholars.

Every senior who had received a scholarship was also recognized, and Kiwanis Awards were handed out.

Mr. Tom Armstrong said, " It gives teachers a refreshing and positive lift to see the results of our effort."

An Academic Recognition Banquet was held May 12 to honor Warren's Top 10 students in each class and the role parents and teachers play in academic achievement.

At the top of the senior class were: Abby Beall, Christa Chilcote, Randy Stevenson, LeAnn McGinley, Bob Baker, Angela Power, Brian Buckner, Steve Gwaltney, Brenda Ramsey, and Brian Ramsey.

Heading the junior class were: Liz Laird, Dana Rhodes, Kathy Lester, Bryan Hilgediek, Lori Carlson, Jeff Cox, Stacy Boger, Tracey Stokes, Robert Yang, and Jim Runo.

Top 10 for the sophomores were: Kelly Kasper, Elizabeth Tunstall, Trinh Le, Jeff Huter, Mike Mitchell, Shannon Brown, Bill Osha, Andy Yang, Jennifer Hill, and Cherie Williams. By Jennifer Eley

Unforgettable fun

In May, the time clock ticked away at a faster pace. What had begun a mere 13 years earlier was drawing to a close. What had once seemed so far away was coming upon us almost too quickly. We had only a few more days to cherish our unforgettable high school days and all of the joy that they brought. We were seniors, almost graduates! Before we left, we wondered, how could we do everyhting that we had wanted and still study for finals!

One of the special events planned to give seniors a last good time was the senior dinner. Time clocks which counted down the remaining events, streamers, balloons, tables that were now decorated and friendly, and many smiling faces helped to transform the cafeteria into a festive banquet room. Dinner was catered, even all-you-can eat. To begin the memorable activity, the senior-most-likely awards were given out. Consisting of 28 categories, seniors were voted most likely to be everything from president to the winner of the Indy 500. The overall winners were announced and presented with their certificates. Also, the senior wills were first available at the dinner. Good times and familiar happenings were brought back to memory by a slide presentation, and the Madrigals sang a heart-felt song about "Friends." Afterward, seniors were invited to dance the night away in the foyer. (continued on page 31)

Unforgettable fun

Another of the special events was the senior olympics. This annual event allowed seniors to legally and literally cover themselves from head to toe in (what else?) shaving cream! Teams consisted of four girls and four guys who were willing to take part in a variety of competitions.

A tricycle race, wheelbarrel race, and a cuddle contest all highlighted the day. Even though the day began as cold and dreary, it was not long before the sun came out to warm up the shaving-creamed seniors. Since the ever-popular shaving cream was everywhere, it sometimes tended to become the main focus of attention. After all, it was a little hard to ignore when every spot of skin was coated in 10 layers! This bunch of fun and sloppy games took place on the football field and gave seniors the chance to let loose, have fun, and join friends.

It may not have seemed as if 13 years of hard work and fun memories had just passed by. Days of homework, football games, and late-night telephone conversations had finally drawn to a close. However, the senior dinner and senior olympics gave seniors a few more times to hold in their memories. After all, it is said that "high school is the best time of your life." With events that were devised to give seniors more chances to cherish the memories, how could they ever forget?

Beginning again

"We're walking away tonight with a diploma that represents more than hours of studying. These diplomas represent years of maturing and growing-up. As Henry Wadsworth Longfellow once wrote," Great is the art of beginning, but greater is the art of ending." It will be hard to leave the security of our families, friends, and teachers, but our education has prepared us. We passed enough tests and overcame enough challenges to graduate.

The tests began simply enough in kindergarten and elementary school. For the first time we really left our parents and took our first steps towards independence. We learned to share, to play by the rules, and to apologize when we did something wrong. We were on our way to growing-up and already wondering what it would be like to be an adult.

Our next big step was junior high. We were terrified of actually having to change classes and teachers all within four minutes. We started learning how to adjust and how to handle responsibility. Somehow, we met the challenges and moved on. We still couldn't wait to grow-up, and we set our sights on high school.

When we finally reached high school, we were awed by the size of the place. Not only was the building twice as big, but the teachers assigned at least twice as much homework. All this time, we were becoming more and more independent. All of a sudden, our parents seemed to be the meanest and most paranoid people on earth. They had to know where we were and with whom at all times, and they made us study and do our homework. As it turned out, we couldn't have done it without them. The whole time we were growing, setting our sights on graduation, always admiring the seemingly unattainable rank of senior.

Well, here we are. Throughout our 13 years of school, we have learned to grow from our defeats and to savor our successes. Tonight represents all of our hard work and growing-up. We never thought we'd actually see tonight, but now that it is here, it's difficult to believe that time could have passed so quickly.

We must remember, however, that tonight is by no means an end. The taking charge of our own lives begins tonight and continues for the rest of our lives. It's time to put all we've learned to work. We're almost officially adults. We all deserve a pat on the back. Graduating is quite an accomplishment." (Excerpts from commencement speech given by Abby Beall on graduation night May 18)

PIECE of Knowledge

Leisure activities were important, but sometimes students forgot that a school was a place to study and to learn. For six hours a day, 176 days a year, the school was a place of learning. The basic subjects--math, English, science, and foreign languages--were taught as well as not-so-basic ones like zoology, speech, and calculus. As students settled down into the patterns of school again, they realized it would be a long, hard path to the end.

It was not all boring, however. Various classes did special projects to liven up learning, such as Meeting of the Minds in the Great Books classes, and the apartheid trial in the International Relations classes. Clubs were another break from school, as students participated in their favorite leisure activities within the school building. Applying what one had learned in a class was interesting, as some people found out there really was a use for all this knowledge!

Weekends were for fun, but during the week, students had to focus on the thing that really mattered..their studies. Even the smallest bit of information presented in a class usually turned out to be an important Piece of Knowledge. By Jennifer Eley

Let's experiment

Although some teens may find science one of their major down falls, it can be one of the most interesting and adventurous courses. Science requires more than a text book. Students are pushed out there in order to do experiments and projects which help them understand today's world.

Biology I & II and Chemistry I & II are the most common choices when picking out a science course. However, one can not say there is not a variety to choose from at Warren. Besides biology and chemistry, classes include physical science, science of arts, science outdoors, science of survival, spelunking, general earth science, aeronautics & space, summer survival, physics, botany, physiology, zoology, genetics, science of photography, and independent study science.

All courses offered are unique and interesting in different ways. Junior, Mandy Maddox said, "I love zoology because that's what I want to go into as a career, but it's the hardest class I've ever taken." No matter what subject of science, it is usually hard to understand at times.

For example, biology teaches students to dissect animals (not an easy task) and about microscopic organisms. As for chemistry, students learn about their surrounding elements and compounds.

Summer survival is an adventurous course taught only in the summer. Hiking through caves and canoeing are just a couple of the many activities. It teaches how to survive on their own.

Four laboratory science credits are required for seniors to graduate. This large variety of courses give science many different angles and makes learning easier and more interesting for students. By Kami Allen

Required course

Before dreams of graduation can become reality, students must face, tackle, and then accomplish one very important, vital subject. That one cruel required class that every student must have in order to graduate is English.

Not only must one have it to graduate, students now must have four full years to complete the high school curriculum. "Probally the one area which students will use most in life after high school is their communicatin skills. These skills include all aspects of the English language. The State of Indiana Department of Public Instruction, realizing this, has declared it necessary for all students to graduate with eight English credits. I agree with their thinking," said Mr. Myles Eley, head of the English Department at Warren Central.

Why do students hate English class as much as they do? Could it be all those subjects, verbs, direct objects...as the list goes on and on? Maybe the thought of having to learn vocabulary definitions while memorizing the spelling of each word for a test each Friday that makes one ready to forget English, or could it possibly be that important paper in every English student's life? Yes, a term paper! Whatever the reason may be, keep this one important thought in mind, English is a class for everyone!

Since English class must appeal to each and every student of Warren Central, the school provides a wide range of English courses to choose from. These classes range from the Phase 1 Sports Literature elective to the Shakespeare Seminar at Phase 5. In between are composition and literature courses designed for both college and non-college bounnd students. Literature courses include mythology, thanatology, English Literature, Worlld Literature, and 20th Century Fiction. Composition courses include Practical English, Introductory Compositon, Intermediate Compostion, and Basic Grammar. Warren also offers a full range of special courses in special interst areas of speech, drama, and journalism.

Adding it all up

Most departments and clubs at Warren Central have planned activities and goals, and this was the case with the math department and the computer club this school year.

During the last year, the math department took part in the American Mathematics Scholastic (AMS) contest, Indiana Council of Teachers Of mathematics (ICT) contest, and the Math Association of America Contest. Contestants from Warren won first place in the AMS and won 10 of the 19 awards in the ISTM contest in this region of the country. Three people from Warren advanced to the second round of the MAA contest.

Mr. Robert Ledger, math department head, felt that the department achieved an important goal this year by publishing a curriculum handbook to help teachers understand the new textbooks that had been purchased recently. He explained that another goal of the department is that of helping remedial math students.

The Computer Club is unlike most clubs because all the equipment that was needed was furnished by the school, so there was no need to hold fund raisers. Mr. Robert Coble, adviser, said that the goal of the club was to have computers available to students so that they could use and understand this technology that is such an integral part of today's world.

Artistic impressions

Creativity pays off in more ways than one in the art department. Not only does it make doing art projects easier, it helps students earn good grades.

Mr. Clyde Foster's students must have a lot of creativity in order to complete their assignments. After all, it's not easy pretending you were or are a king or queen of a future or past civilization in order to create a cover for your coffin. The royal crest or symbol, significant events and personal objects of importance are shown on the sarcophagus covers. "This project is more challenging than others because it makes us think more than usual," said junior art student Traci Remmo. Finished projects must be at least 1/2 human scale, and may include the spouse of the artist, since they will be buried together. Family pets may also be included.

Past assignments for finals have been to paint a ceremonial portrait mask showing both the expression of inner joy and anger. Requirements for this final were to make the masks cover at least 90% of the picture plane and to use good design principals. The theme of another final was "Dreams, Illusions, Fantasies, Nightmares, and the Reality of a High School Education."

Projects like the spring final are challenging to the students because they "make them think. They think art is supposed to be 'easy,'" said Mr. Foster.

A benefit of the hard thinking is membership in the Art Honor Society. About 25 of the 300 students who take art are in the Honor Society. These students must be art majors and be good students.

Creativity is useful, as well as helpful in some situations. Some students work for Marvel Comics. Others student teach art, while others are self-employed in jewelry design. All in all, bring creative in the art department pays off.

Independent living

Unique was in style this year, and Home Economics classes were a great way for students to learn more about themselve and become independent.

For example, many clothing classes were offered. Contemporary clothing, Clothing Arts, Textiles and Clothing, Creative Design and Construction with Frabic, Tailoring, and Independent study are some of the suggested courses.

As for Food and Nutrition classes, students could become gourmet chefs. Creative cooking, Foods with a Flair, Cultural Foods, Gourmet Chef, and Food forFfitness were the courses offered. These courses were definitely suggested for the guys too, so they could help out those oncoming independent women.

Child Development was also a great course to take. This course covered rearing a child from pregnancy to school age. For students who plan to on go into child related careers, this course was a good starting point.

To help students learn how to design their future homes, Housing and Interior Design was offered. It taught students how to choose a place a place to live and how to decorate and buy furnishings.

If sudents wanted all these in one, Independent Living was an alternative. This offered areas of housing and home furnishings, foods and nutrition, clothing, consumer education, child development and family health and/ or home management. After all that, students should be able to go out and face that big bad world.

One of the big events that took place this year was the Home Economics Fair in January during the lunch periods. L.S. Ayres, Citizens Gas, Planned Parenthood, March of Dimes, and Indiana Pork Producers were just a few of the10 to 12 exhibitors from businesses that came. Our own food services, horticulture, and child care participated. Fun drawings and style shows were part of the event. By Kami Allen

In the spotlight

Opening night. Being in the spotlight. Hearing the thunderous applause of the audience. Those are some of the things actors and actresses dream of. The best way for some to receive these things early is to be active in the drama department.

Anyone interested in drama could be in Drama Club. This club elected officers and was active in the successes of the productions of the drama department.

Members of the Thespians also had a very productive school year. Thespians is the honor organization for those in theater. Students gain membership by a point system. Ten hours of work in theater equals one point. It takes ten points to become a member. After earning membership, students received stars each additional ten points.

The success of the drama departments productions are evident. "Midsummer Night's Dream," "Winnie the Poo," and "Lil Abner" all had high audience turnouts for their performances.

Students also had the chance to "run the show" with the Variety Show and the One Act plays. These productions were open to anyone who wanted to audition. A panel of student judges chose the acts. It gave students a chance to direct and produce their own shows.

Mr. Thom Feit, head of the drama department, summed up the 1987-88 year by saying, "The year has been successful artistically and educationally because students learned different types of plays. We've also had a great amount of participation from the student body."

All year the Drama Club and Thespians worked to make their productions special. The result was one of the best years yet.

Around the world

In 1987-88, a lot of historical events took place. The stock market took a dive. The government got caught engaging in covert activities. TV evangelists engaged in a new type of "holy" wars. Of course, this provided great news stories, but it also provided interesting topics for conversation in social studies classes.

The Social Studies Department, headed by Mr. David Sausser, found numerous events to teach students about life. The classes within the department are varied.

Of course, there are the required classes: United States History, United States Government, and Economics. A lot of students have mixed views on these classes. Some feel it is a waste of time, but others feel differently. "People need to understand how the government works," said senior Angie Heady.

The department also provided an excellent choice of electives. International Relations, taught by Sue Ludwig, gave students insights on American foreign policy. "It brings out a lot of ideals," said senior Mike Gonzalez. "Plus, we're able to study in-depth about other countries."

Mrs. Ludwig also sponsored an club within the department called Close-Up. Close-Up gave students from all around the country the chance to visit the nation's capital and to see how the government works first-hand.

Close-Up took place from March 6 to March 12. The Warren Central delegation was able to meet with State Representatives and influential people in Washington.

The Social Studies Department offered a variety of classes where students had an opportunity to learn about "life and times" past and present.

Foreign adventure

With over 850 students enrolled in foreign language classes this year, it was hard for them to go unnoticed. Languages offered to students at Warren included Spanish, French, German, and Latin

About half the number of students enrolled in the classes were members of foreign language clubs: Spanish Club, German Club, French Club, Latin Club, and Club International.

Three years of Latin were offered, and four years of Spanish, German and French, with a fifth year of independent study for those students who started learning foreign languages before ninth grade.

Spanish Club was the largest club, with 172 members. Pen pals in Mexico, sponsoring children in Latin American countries, and a spring picnic were some activities of the club. Some Mexican restaurants, such as Pepe's, were visited by the club for a taste of traditional Mexican food. Mrs. Beth Wolff, sponsor of Spanish Club, also offered a spring break trip for students. This years trip was a week-long Carribbean Cruise, which was enjoyed by 46 students and chaperones.

German Club usually takes a trip to German speaking countries with Mrs. Carla Harman, but since the value of the dollar was down in Europe, an affordable trip was not possible.

——Foreign adventure

Selling German Advent Calendars, bowling, a movie fest, and the Stratton Mountain Boy concert were only a few of the activities completed by the 85 members of the club.

Although French Club does not offer trips to other countries, the members still obtain a taste of French life. A Mardi Gras celebration, French films, and dinner at a French restaurant are the main activities offered.

The students who are involved in Latin Club went to Latin Day at Butler University in the spring. A Roman Banquet at Beef 'n' Boards and a slave sale were the other main activities the club was involved in. No trip for Latin students is in the for seeable future because "the political situation in Italy is unstalbe at this time," said sponsor Mr. Harry Preston.

If any student has ever wanted to really get to know a foreign exchange student, Club International is a good way to accomplish that goal. A reception was held at the beginning of the school year to welcome the new students to Warren. A Homecoming float, a Christmas party, and a Spring picnic were also planned by the 100 students in the club. The exchange students also went to the Kopper Kettle Restaurant in Morristown.

All in all, foreign languages open opportunities for fun and excitement, as well as offering the language itself. By Liz Terando

Cheers of victory

Two bits! Four bits! Six bits a dollar! All for the Warriors stand up and holler!

That was just one of the many cheers that could be heard coming from the varsity, junior varsity, and girls cheerleaders this past year. The responsibility of keeping the spirits of the fans up at times was not always as easy as it seemed. "Sometimes gettinng the fans started was difficult but after they got started, they were great," said junior varsity cheerleader Tonya Adams.

Like previous years, all three squads attended Miami of Ohio's cheerleading camp but this past year proved to be an exceptial one for the girls. In fact, all three squads received spirit sticks among other awards. The varsity squad cheered their way to the top with two second place ribbons, a first place ribbon, and a trophy in a chant competition. As for the junior varsity, the girls had no problem in finding their way to the finals in the cheer competition. Having no problem deserving some of the glory, the girls cheerleaders finished with three excellent awards and two superior awards. Over all, the girls believed camp to be a very worthwhile and rememberable experience.

The tradition for having guy cheerleaders was used again this year. The guys that were chosen to be this year's basemen were Scott Craft, Jeff Cheshire, Jason McCord, Chad Keller, Tyron Shelton, Jack Dye, Scott McDaniel, and Steve O'Mara. Basemen for the girls cheerleaders were Doug Orange, Kevin Bates, Jeff Osborne, Bryan Norcutt, Brad Milton, and Brent Thomas. Girls' cheerleading sponsor Mrs. Ann Starky commented that although the boys had little previous experience, they were enthusiastic and very hard workers. The cheerleaders sponsored the Valentine's Day dance as well as a car wash and sold buttons on and off throughout the season. The proceeds will go towards new cheer uniforms for the girls.

Senior varsity Kathy Anderson said, "Over all the whole year was quite interesting. Our new sponsor was great and she did a good job helping the cheerleaders with new ideas and more recognition."

Spirit boosters

Halls filled with brightly colored posterboards, as individual football, basketball, and wrestling lockers are ever so uniquely but carefully decotated with all sorts of balloons, streamers, and bright construction paper. The electricity of the finished products seemed to make the halls come alive with anticipation and excitement of the upcoming game or meet on that day. Senior football player Steve Yamen said, "Coming to school on Friday mornings and seeing my locker decorated made me really excited and fired up about the game that night."

From the very start of football in the fall through the winter months into spring, football, basketball, and wrestling boosters worked diligently on certain days after school or even before the school day ever began. The girls made treats as well as pasted and glued symbols of best wishes for individual athletes on walls and lockers.

Secret Pals for the varsity football team began four years ago with the help of Mrs. Gilman. The tradition has since then continued on to the present time. In fact, it inspired the idea of having Secret Pals for the boy's varsity basketball team. With the help of speech teacher Mrs. Susie Brevard, the basketball team had Secret Pals for the first time during the 87-88 season. Secret Pals are a group of girls who have anonomously volunteered their time to do special things like decorating lockers, making treats and keeping a scrap book for a football or basketball player they have chosen. These scrap books were presented to the athletes at an awards banquet which followed at the conclusion of the each sport's season. Sophomore Kelli McGinley said, "It was a lot of fun getting to keep a scrap book for my Secret Pal Brad Johnson. You really get to know your athlete a lot better."

Likewise, the wrestlers also have a spirit club that is directed by the wrestling cheerleaders or Matmaids. These girls not only decorate lockers aned make signs but must also cheer at all home and away wrestling meets.

Although a year of sports have come and gone, the excitement and enthusiam that the halls once held, will always be remembered. "I am looking forward to a new football season as well as a new player to be my secret pal," said sophomore Wendy Day.

High priorities

What sort of clubs meet during activity period? Well, two of these are the National Honor Society and the Hi-C Club.

The National Honor Society is very active in community work. Not only do the members need 20 hours in community service, but they also help tutor any student who needs help after school.

Another big project of the Honor Society is going to La Rue Carteer Hospital to visit and play bingo with the patients that reside there.

Kohl's inventory is also another way for the members to earn service hours. The members go to Kohl's Department store and spend about five to six hours taking inventory on all of the items in the store. This twice-a-year project is the biggest money maker activity.

Profits from the years activities assure plenty of money for more projects next year. "Hopefully, we can give a scholarship at the end of the year," said senior Randy Stevenson, president of the Honor Society.

Another club that meets during activity period is Hi-C Club. The High School Christian Club has been in existance for 30 years, and this year there are 60 members.

Throughout the year, the club sponsors many activities. The most popular of these are roasting hot dogs and having Bible study. It also sponsors holiday parties.

The officers of this years club are: Kevin Peak, Steve Hester, Ed Trees, Jenny Huffman, and John Castle.

Having fun is one of the mottos of most clubs. Both the Honor Society and the Hi-C Club fit into this category. Through Bible study and community service these two clubs have fun while serving the community and the school. By Sheryl Lamey

Community service

While most clubs at Warren were geared more toward having fun, there were those clubs whose goals were to help the community. Three such clubs were Key Club, Rainbow Club, and Student Council.

Key Club activities, during the last year, included visiting the Americana Nursing Home once a week to help the residents get exercise; and once every two weeks to play board games. They also visited Lutherwood Childrens' Home in an effort to make the kids feel wanted and loved. Tracey Beard, president of Key Club, said," I feel we achieved all our major goals by making a positive difference to the people in the comminity."

Rainbow Club helped out in the school and comminity by sponsoring The Christmas Dance in December, with procedes being distributed to Gleaners Food Bank, a $500 donation to the United Christian Service, and a scholarship given to one graduating senior. Among other activities were two contests to come up with a poster and a theme for the Christmas Dance. Mrs. Deborah Cummings, felt that they achieved their goal of promoting unity among students, regardless of class or race, and to get more students involved in school and comminity activities.

Student Council sponsored such events as both Homecoming and Winter Homecoming, Prom, and Senior Week. Among comminity efforts was the collecting of toys for the needy around Christmas. It also held a blood drive to help ease the shortage of blood in Marion County. Mr Harry Preston said, "The Senior class showed real leadership this year." He also felt that Student Council provided student activities and student leadership for the student body.

Part of the action

Some of us sit around with nothing to do, and be bored out of our minds. We have no intentions of doing anything with our family or friends. But some of us don't let it get the best of us. These people might be refered to as members of the Bordom Busters. Bordom Busters is a club related group who have the time of their lives.

Bowling, swimming, skating, putt putting, movies, and eating pizza are just a few things that the Boredom Busters do to keep the boredom blues away. The club members hold an activity every week, even if it's burning calories by feeding their faces.

This group of kids and adults is led by Mrs. Lorrie Seitzinger, a teacher in the special education department. She says, "It's a time to make friends and have fun at the same time. It's a time to be yourself."

Each member of the Boredom Busters pays for his own activities, but not out of his own pockets. Fund raisers are going on constantly to help the kids enjoy themselves in each activity that the club does as one.

Boredom Busters is a school club activity that all of those who have nothing to do should join to have the time of their lives.

Let's get physical

Students got into shape not only in physical education classes (required for all sophomores) with courses like swimming and archery, but by joining clubs that appealed to their particular interests.

The bowling club happened to "strike" the fancy of about 30 to 40 Warriors each week from September to March. According to the sponsor, Mr. Frank Tardy, the year began with 16 teams of three people each.

The mixed leagues bowled on Wednesday afternoons at Hindel Lanes using a handicap system. Hindel Lanes charged the students a special price of only 50 cents a game with free bowling shoes if needed.

The club is sanctioned by the Young American Bowling Alliance, so members are eligible for medals and awards on a state and national level for top performance.

The bowlers ended the year with a pizza and coke party held after school in the cafeteria where trophies and awards were presented.

"Frisbee golf is a new sport that is fast becoming a trend," said Mr. Leo Hine, sponsor of the Firsbee Club.

The 25 members had the perfect opportunity to participate in this up-and-coming sport since an 18-hole frisbee golf course is located only 10 miles from Warren Central, at the S&H Campground, where members held regular outings.

The club participants played frisbee golf and threw free-style, practicing different types of throws and perfecting distance and accuracy.

The members of the Polar Bear Club, led by their sponsor, Mr. Joe Brooks, kept in shape with regular runs after school.

Even rain, sleet, and snow didn't deter these hardy runners as they prepared for spring track season or just ran to keep in top form.

Let's get physical

What do you do when you want to play a sport, but it isn't recognized by the school? What do you do if you are an athlete and want to talk to other people your own age with the same interests? The answer to both of these is you join a club, the specific clubs are Girl's Soccer and FCA.

The Girl's Soccer Team was around for its second year and was coached by Gary Roberts and Delsy Craig. Craig played on the team her senior year at Warren and came back to help take some of the load off of Roberts who was also head coach of both of the boys teams. "Delsey did a great job as our coach because as a former player she new what we needed help on," said sophomore Candy Carnahan.

Increased practice and more experienced players have helped to start out this season on the right foot. With only one senior on the team, this was definetley one of the youngest squads Warren fielded. "I'm confident that we are starting off this season at the point in our training and skill where we left off last year," said Junior Becky Pratter.

In competition the Lady Warriors were 0-8 until they went into their first game of the State Tourannent and beat the Richmond team 1-0. They then played North Central and lost, but the point was that in two seasons they finally won a game. "It was great to finally win a game and the fact that it was in state made it all the better," said Junior Tammy Anderson.

FCA a nation wide-orginization has a chapter here at Warren with both boy and girl divisions. Mr. Steve Kent was in charge of the Boy's FCA this year and its president was senior Chad Madcalfe. There were about 20 members in the club this year. "The purpose of FCA is for athletes with similar beliefs to get together and share ideas about Christian living," said Mr. Kent . The club met during B club days and in the morning once a week. There weren't that many activities this year because of conflicts with scheduling.

The Girl's FCA was sponsored by Miss Audrey Bush and Mrs. Sue Jimerson. There was no president because the club was more informal. Members also met on Tuesday mornings and during B club. The girls went Caroling at Christmas, went on a retreat, and had an end-of-the-year pizza party. "I enjoy being the sponsor of Girl's FCA," said Miss Bush.

Listen to the music

When a person thinks of the Music Department, he usually think of instruments. Whether he thinks of the drums, the clarinet, or the guitar, he usually does not think of an instrument that can not be seen unless one opens his mouth. This instrument, of course, is the vocal cords.

The choirs this year consist of six groups. They were: the Madrigals, a mixed group that dances and sings; the Trebletones, the highest, female only, dancing and singing group; the Windsors, the only all male group; the Warrenaires, another mixed group that dances and sings; the Golden Singers, the second highest, female only, dancing and singing group; and the Crystalaires, the third highest, female only singing group.

Mr. Phil Dunn was the director of the Madrigals, the Windsors, and the Warrenaires, while Mr. Ken Lewis directed the Trebletones, the Golden Singers, and the Crystalaires.

The choirs went to the State School Music Association Contest where their division ratings were as follows: Madrigals, first division in state and district; Trebletones, first division; Warrenaires, first division; Golden Singers, second division; and Crystalaires, first division.

Kim Weaver, junior and member of the Trebletones, said, "Choir is a very important part of my life because it is not just singing; it is emotion!!"

The SATB Choir is directed by Mr. Lewis and is in the top 10 choirs in the state. It practiced after school and consisted of anyone who tried out and made it.

During the year, the Madrigals took a trip to Tennessee and competed there. Along with all the enjoyment the members had, they brought back a second place over-all in the dance competition.

"Being in Madrigals is the best thing that has ever happened to me. Out of all my high school experiences, the years that I have been in the choir department will be the most memorable," said junior Eric Phillippe.

Strike up the band

Picture it. A hot August day, the week before the start of school. Most students would be at the nearest pool or air conditioned building. But the Warren Central Gold Brigade could be seen on the practice field preparing for the 1987 marching season.

Junior Mary Cougill said,"Normally band camp is two weeks before school, but since some members were in the Pan Am opening ceremonies, it was the week before school started."

After marching season, the band performed in many concerts. The highlight of the year was the trip to Florida and performance in a parade at Epcot Center April 6-10. The Gold Brigade also marched in the 1988 500 Festival Parade.

The Jazz Ensemble, directed by band director Mr. Brian Lackey, had many performances over the past year. Among those wereWarren World of Music, the convocation on the first day of school, and various basketball games. Junior Matt Abrams, who plays drums in the Jazz Ensemble, said,"Jazz Ensemble is a nice diversion from normal concert band. We play a large variety of jazz, from mellow tunes to funk-jazz. We also play good rock-n-roll tunes."

The Warren Orchestra was also very busy during the 1987-88 year. Jimmy McDaniels was the featured piano and saxophone soloist in the first orchestra concert in November. The Stonybrook and Creston orchestras joined Warren for the annual Orchestravaganza on Februrary 25.

On April 21, the All State High School Band and Orchestra presented a concert at Warren.

Next year, the orchestra is planning on taking a trip which director Robert Beckley said is "just in the planning stages right now."

The instrumental music season was best summed up by Mr. Beckley when he said,"The members have worked hard this year and are very good."

Academics excells

In the 80's, many have questioned America's adequacy in education. With SAT scores and grades on the decline, Indiana decided it was time to improve the system. Govenor Orr came up with the A+ program which led to ISTEP. As for Warren Central, the Academic Competition and the Brain Game also provide students the chance to excell academically.

Mr. Steve Comsikey and Mr. Rick Reed sponsor the Academic Competition which began in '87. Each team consist of a three-person squad who answers 20 multiple choice questions in categories ranging from social studies, math, science, English, fine arts, and an all-around category. The great thing about the competition is that students volunteer so anyone can have a chance to participate. "It allows those students who might not be involved in other areas a competive outlet," said Mr. Comiskey.

Another competition that stresses academics is the Brain Game. Unlike the Academic Competition, the Brain Game has been around for a long time. Unfortunately, Warren's team didn't do very well. "We didn't feel too bad," said sponsor Mr. Barnes,"We got a bad draw." Warren lost the first round to Chatard, a semi-finalist team. The team consist of seniors Abby Beal, John Dodson, Brian Buckner, Steve Gwaltney, and alternates Randy Stevenson and Angela Power.

Warren has looked for ways to stress academic excellence with teams like the Brain Game and the Academic Competition. "I'm glad it got started now," said Mr. Comiskey. "You've got to start somewhere." By Natalie Polson

Learning by doing

The Walker Career Center is a place where many opportunities can be found. Unfortunately, many students are not aware of the vocational programs that are offered by the Career Center.

The center serves its students by offering a broad and varied program of courses in business and industrial education as well as specialized vocational programs. Students may enroll in the introductory courses to prepare themselves for college and career preparation.

The basic five vocational categories are: General Information, Business Education, Industrial Technology Programs, and Special Interest.

The Secretarial Lab (Administrative Support Systems) at Walker Career Center, under the direction of Mrs. Linda Shew, is experiencing a phase of updating and advancement. During the spring semester of 1988, all students were placed in offices within the schools in Warren Township to serve as student-secretaries.

The Secretarial/Transcription Laboratory was equipped to give training for specific jobs. There are 24 stations designed to give the students exposure in becoming a general secretary, stenographer, legal secretary, medical transcriptionist, and clerk typist ... positions as found in actual businesses of the community.

Other Business Education vocational courses include Word Proccessiing, Accounting, Business English, Business Law, Keyboarding, Speedwriting, and Record Keeping.

Data Processing, another Business Education Course offers many opportunities for a rewarding career. Any junior or senior is eligible to take the course. Electronic Data Processing is the logical, controlled flow of information which moves from a point of origin through machines to produce a designed result.

The Walker Career Center also offers Industrial Education Courses such as Auto Body, Auto Machines, Building Trades, Diesal Machines and Machine Trades.

Saturday February 20, three seniors in the Machine Trades Class, under the direction of Mr. Richard Gilliam, attended the Regional VICA Competition (Vocational Industrial Clubs of America) held at Central Nine Vocational School in Greenwood. The three seniors were Tony Cox, Bill Nelson, and Adam Smith. During the competition the students performed in the percision machining area. The students also competed against other schools in Indiana in Vocational machining classes.

The students who qualified were able to compete in the state final competition, held in the Walker Career Center on March 26. According to Mr. Gilliam,the students competed for a scholarship at Vincennes University, which has an excellent machining program. He said,"Kids who start working as a machinist while out of school can make 5 to 6 dollars an hour during thier training." Mr. Gilliam expressed that the opportunity is excellent if students take up some of the courses offered in the Career Center. He said, "The earning potential is unlimited."

Senior,Tony Cox said," Lots of money can be made in this career, and I am very excited about the competion. Tony also said,"I have been in the course for two years and I would reccommend this class to any sophomore." On April 9, Vincennes University hosted the 27th annual State Machine Trade Competition. During this competition, seventy-five students from Indiana competed for prizes as large as a $500 dollar scholarship. In the advanced division, Russel Jordon was awarded second place. In the beginners division, Steve Uppfalt took 3rd place.

The Welding Class in the Career Center also competed in the VICA Competition. From March 16-19 the class, instructed by Mr. George Knapp, attended the Kentucky Welding Classic in Louisville, Indiana. The competition determined which high school has the best Welding Team between Indiana and Kentucky.

Mr. Knapp said that the competition consisted of teams of five. The categories are Mig-Welder, Tig Welder, Stick Welder, Oxy-Acetylene,and Theory Welder. He said,"We won first place last year in the Tig-Welder category."

Senior Vaughn Cowper, who competed in the Weld Off said, "I am very excited about the competition and I recommend this class to anybody."

Marty Stevens won 2nd place in Gas Metal Arc, while David Wright won 3rd place in Sheilded Metal Arc Welding, and Rich Fowler took 4th place in Gas Tungster Welding. The team also had Vaugn Cowper take 5th place in Oxyacetylen Welding. The team came in 3rd place over all, finishing just 9/10 of a point behind the 1st place team.

The point that was made before was bought out again by Mr. Knapp when he said that much money can be made in the industrial field. It is a shame that the majority of students leave high school without any skill or trade when so many can be found in the Walker Career Center.

Some Specialized Vocational Programs are Child Care, Radio Broadcasting, Horticulture, Distributive Education, and Dental Assistimg.

The Dental Assisting Program provides a basic understanding of the skills professional conduct, and ethics needed by the modern dental assistant. An opportunity is also provided in the Dental Program to learn management skills of dental office.

Mrs. Margorie Wanamaker, Dental Assisting Instructo,r said that the students did brush-ins for the third-grade elementry children of Warren Township. Mrs. Wanamaker also said that the group put on skits such as Happy Clowns, Snoopy, and California Raisins.

To familiarize students with the Dental Assisting Course Mrs. Wanamaker made brochures and talked to the science classes.

The tuition for the Dental Assisting Program for Warren Township students is $1000.00. For students out of Warren Township the tuition is $1200.00.

Restaurant and Food Management is also a Specialized Vocational Program. With this course, students are allowed to work in the restaurant in the Career Center. The Threshold is designed for training students in basic quantity food production and services.

The Threshold is a regular class, students can sign up for two to three hours in the morning, and in the afternoon the class is a three-hour block. Mrs. Janet Morris, Threshold Director, said that people call often wanting to know if there are students available to work. Mrs. Morris said that she can get leads for her students. "Anyone interested in the food business can see how the operation works in the real world because we're open to the public," said Mrs. Morris.

Senior Willie Griffin said, "I think that the Threshold is fun and exciting, the class provides an opportunity if you are planning to go into the food industry." He also said,"Mrs. Morris gave me a

April 26 through May 1, three Warren DECA (Distributed Education Club of America) members, Jessica Funches, Diane Dowling, and Mike Geryak voted to elect the National DECA Officers. Diane Dowling was selected to participate in the DECA National Leadership Academy. Over all, the state of Indiana had two first place, two second, one third place, and had eleven top ten finishers. This proved to be the best Indiana has ever done. The senior club members were honored at an appreciation banquet on May 15.

The OEA Club is for students interested in developing skills for careers as business professionals. Mr. Russ Essex, a Walker Career Center teacher, is the local adviser to the Warren Central chapter and one of only 1,094 teachers across the country who have served their chapter for more than 10 years. For, this Mr. Essex was recognized during the National Leadership Conference On April 28-May 1 in Louisville, Kentucky.

Karen Pennington and Jennifer Fruin also represented Warren Central at this conference. Karen took first place in shorthand and fourth in proofreading, while Jennifer Fruin won the Torch Award at the annual state OEA Contest that was held in Indianapolis from March 11-13. The girls will be a part of the 2,500 students across the nation competing in shorthand, economic awareness, business math, and parliamentary procedures.

Summits further world peace

In the past two years and a half years President Ronald Reagan and General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev have held four summits. The last two meetings not only gave the leaders a chance to talk, but they also gave them the opportunity to see the other's homeland.

First, the two superpower leaders met in Washington. During this third summit they agreed to limit the number of warheads on land-and-sea launched missiles. This was part of the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces Treaty (INF).

In order for this treaty to take affect, Congress had to vote on it. Therefore, another summit had to be held. This time behind the "Iron Curtain" in Moscow.

As the world watched, President Reagan transformed himself from the most anti-Soviet crusaders of our time to a leader willing to bring peace to the world through Soviet relations. Not only did he hold four successful summits with Gorbachev, but he also was ready to meet again with the Soviet leader for a fifth.

By the time Reagan met with Gorbachev in Moscow, Congress had passed the INF Treaty. President Reagan had secured his place in the history books as the first President to negotiate a true cut in nuclear arms.

As the leaders became closer, so did their cultures. Already Michael Jackson Pepsi ads were airing on Soviet TV and McDonald's decided to open 20 restaurants in Moscow.

As the two leaders met there was an overall hope that someday the threat of nuclear weapons would forever disappear.

Airplane mishaps grab news headlines

1987-88 was a bad year for airplanes nationwide, but one tragic event stood out.

It was on October 20 that a pilotless A-7 Air Force jet crashed into the Ramada Inn-Airport, killing ten people. The powerless jet crashed into the hotel after Major Bruce L. Teagarden ejected from the cockpit when he was unable to land at Indianapolis International Airport. The jet glanced off the top of the Park Fletcher bank branch of Bank One, Indianapolis, before slamming into the side of the Ramada Inn.

This tragic event was a great shock to the city, capturing headlines for over a week. An investigation conducted by the Air Force found the pilot innocent of gross negligence. Counseling was provided for family of the victims and for employees of the Ramada Inn to help them cope with the disaster. The Air Force also issued over $100,000 in property damage payments and replacement wages for employees of the Ramada Inn.

The national scene was no better. In Detroit, all but one child were killed when a passenger jet went down across a freeway. A few similar incidents occured, one involving gunfire from a disgruntled employee and another in which a plane just disappeared over the ocean.

A few less tragic but nevertheless bizarre events included: a passenger jet that stalled over the ocean, plummeted, and then was restarted in time to save the plane; a passenger jet that landed safely despite the pilot having a heart attack; and two instances where engines simply fell from the wings during mid-flight.

Besides these frightening occurences were innumerable near-misses which made flying the skies not-so-friendly.

Although bad luck played a factor in many of these events, many point to government deregulation as the primary cause during a time when air traffic is at an all-time high. Air traffic controllers also complain of being seriously overloaded and overworked.

All things considered, flying promises to be a more harrowing venture in the times ahead until a solution is found or the airlines' luck improves.

Baby Jessica rescued

Many dramatic, exciting, and heart grabbing events have occured, but one of the biggest was the rescue of little Jessica McClure.

On Wednesday, October 14, at 9:30 a.m.,18 month old, Jessica McClure had been playing with four other toddlers when she fell down an abandoned well shaft in the back yard of her aunt's house.

It was then that the town of Midland, Texas came together and never left Jessica in her time of trouble. Trapped in a well 29 feet below the surface for 58 hours, Jessica survived due to the stuggle and determination of those who were fighting to get her out.

In People Weekly, David Lilly, a special investigator with the U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration, rescue director said,"I've never seen more dedicated people. We actually had to force some of the men to quit and leave because they were about to drop. One guy was lying on the ground throwing his guts out. Another dropped from exhaustion and we had to carry him out. It was a sight to see."

Afterward there was the incredible celebration for when those who worked so hard and so long had succeeded in getting her out of the well.

By Kim Meadors

A national celebration

"We the people of the United States of America," the constitution began. On September 17, 1787 our forfathers decided to conduct the most important experiment in the history of mankind. They formed a government of the people, by the people, and for the people. During that sweltering summer in Philadelphia, voices roared as tempers steamed. Would it work? Could a people be able to govern themselves successfully?

As America celebrated the 200th anniversery of this document, these questions were answered. Yes, this new form of government does work and is successful. If those delegates in Philadelphia had surrendered to the heat and their tempers, who knows where we would be today.

From holding lecture sessions to having balloon races, people all over the nation celebrated the birthday of this historic document.

Supreme Court nominees face public 'firing squad'

Robert Bork, Douglas Ginsburg, and Anthony Kennedy. Do these names ring a bell? It may have seemed as though they were in front of a firing squad. These Supreme Court nominees received a lot of publicity. Picked by President Ronald Reagan, these three men's lives were filled with controversy, choas, and public scrutiny.

During the summer of 1987, Robert Bork was selected to replace Justice Louis Powell, Jr., but bias feelings came against Bork when Congress stated that he had prejudice attitudes toward minorities and abortion. After months of questioning, the Senate Judiciary Committee decided Bork would not be allowed to serve on the high court.

Douglas Ginsburg was next in line. Everything looked like roses, until it was revealed that Ginsburg used maijuana during the 1960's and 1970's. This practically ruined his chances of serving, since the Supreme Court was backing their "Just Say No to Drugs" campaign. After nine days, Ginsburg's nomination went "up in smoke."

Finally, the next nominee came into the picture. He was Anthony Kennedy. Kennedy was decribed as a "conservative dragonslayer." But, controversy followed him as well. The issues brought up were his age, 51, and his involement and membership to a prejudice country club. The Senate Judiciary Committee said that he was too young to serve on the court and that he had written documents that showed he was prejudice against blacks. But, his other opinions and legal experience made him look like he was the perfect candidate.

After long months of lingering, waiting, and questioning, the court finally filled the ninth seat with Anthony Kennedy.

Students' freedom limited

"Congress shall make no law...abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press..." In part this is what the often quoted First Amendment promises. But, does someone have the right to take this away? This question was answered in Kuhlmeier vs. Hazelwood.

The case started in May of 1983 involved stories about teenage pregnancy and the impact of divorce on children. Principal, Robert Reynolds, of Hazelwood East High School removed stories from the high school paper the Spectrum , because he said that the articles were "too sensitive" and that they invaded the students privacy.

On November 26, 1984 the Kuhlmeier case went to court. Almost a year after it began, the case was decided in favor of the school. However, the editor Kathy Kuhlmeier appealed the courts decision. This time the panel ruled 2-1 in favor of Kuhlmeier. Not satisfied, the school district took it to the Supreme Court. Through much debating on January 13, 1988, the Supreme Court upheld the right for school administrators to have rights to censor school newspaper stories.

Now the first ammendment has been taken away from high school journalism students. Also, it can effect other school sponsored activities which involve students, such as theatre productions, art, science, debates, research projects, and cheerleading.

Yes, someone does have the right to limit the First Amendment, and they did!

Black Monday '87

One event that won't soon be forgotten is the stock market crash of late 1987. It was on October 19 that Black Monday occured.

On this date the New York Stock Exchange plummeted 508 points on more than 600 million shares of volume— worse than the infamous crash of 1929. The plunge was spawned by disappointing news about the trade deficit in conjunction with higher interest rates.

An element that acted as a catalyst for the fall was the practice of computer trading, in which computers automatically put in "sell" orders after stocks fall a certain amount. Huge volumes of stock are traded in this way in a matter of seconds.

At first indifferent to the fall, President Reagan said, "There is nothing wrong with the economy. I don't think anybody should panic, because all the economic indicators are solid."

But at the behest of economic advisors President Reagan agreed to meet with congressional leaders to enact economic reforms. This move, designed to reduce the United States trade deficit and restore confidence in the economic community, resulted in a raise in taxes and cuts in expenditures.

Along with this the United States, West Germany, and Japan managed to muster enough coordinated policy to damp down the gyrating stocks, bonds, and currencies.

After the crash, very few people feared another Great Depression. Many viewed the fall as a long-awaited correction and a signal for government action about the trade deficit. Others viewed the fall as a prelude to recession and an end of the several years of economic prosperity and expansion. The bear had taken over the bull market.

Students earn $$

"Here I go again. It's a weeknight, I have homework in every possible subject, and I have to work tonight." How many times was this phrase heard? The answer was countless. Part-time jobs were a regular part of many students' lives.

Students had jobs anywhere from fast food restaurants to major department stores. While most students earned $3.35 an hour, some were lucky enough to get $3.50 to $3.65 an hour. Junior Jenny Berry said, "I really like my job because I get a lot of hours and more than minimum wage."

For most, part-time jobs were just what teen-agers needed to keep an income. Senior Lori Kuykendall said, "My part-time job is what keeps me going. If it weren't for my job, I'd be broke all the time."

While having a part-time job was a great way to make money, it was extremely time consuming. Grades also had to be kept up. "I work about 20-30 hours a week," said junior Becky Prater. "My grades haven't dropped though. But I do have to work much harder to keep them all where they should be."

Some students worked to save money for something special. Jenny Berry said, "I'm saving as much as possible for my Spring Break vacation because I have to pay for it myself." Chris Horton, junior, said, "I'm saving for my car."

Whether it was saving for something special, or just earning some extra spending money, part-time jobs were a common way for teen-agers to receive money without bugging Mom or Dad. By Jodi Fields

College planning begins with tests

College preparation plans for seniors began back in the junior year when students took the P.S.A.T.

Mrs. Delores Short, Guidence director at Warren, responded that it, "Gives you (students) practice so that when you take the S.A.T. you will have experience." Also, the test is used to determine who will receive scholarships from the National Merit Scholarship program.

Next, students registered for the S.A.T., which measures English and math skills. In addition to this test, students could also choose to take the A.C.T.

Then came the decision of where to go to college. Here was where most of the problems occurred. In Indiana alone there are 40-50 colleges-not to mention the thousand of other colleges and universities around the nation.

How did one choose the perfect college? Praying or tossing a coin might have helped some, but others used more reliable ways, such as the researching college programs, to decide on a school. First, a self-inventory was suggested. What were your goals? Your knowledge? Your money? Your interests? What did you do best? And lastly, how hard were you willing to work? After anwering these and other questions student were able to decide what colleges fit their needs best.

As the field of choices narrowed, students arranged vistations and interviews with admission officers, and faculty of the college.

Finally, as the end of the senior year approached, students made the final decision and began to fill out an application.

Echoing the feelings of most seniors, Scott Weishaar said, "I was really relieved when I finally decided what college I would go to. It was a tough decision to make. I am glad that it is over."

Cliffs Notes help

It is English class, and the teacher decides that everyone must read a 500-page novel by the end of the week. It is already Wednesday. How will half of the class probably get through this? Cliffs Notes....of course.

Cliffs Notes, used mainly by English students, were most helpful. Although sometimes students used them "to get out of" reading a book, they helped students to gain a better understanding of a book.

"Cliffs Notes have been a great help to me. I have to admit that sometimes, though, I have to use them instead of reading the book, if I have a lot of things to do, but when I have spare time later, I read the assignment that was due," said junior Lisa Miller.

Most teachers realized that students used these little black and yellow books. However, they pulled questions from the novel to put on the tests that could not be found in the Cliffs Notes.

As the Cliffs Notes clearly state in the front of the book, the students should read the book before using the Cliff Notes.

Looking for adventure ?

It's not just a job, it's an adventure. Has anyone ever given those words some serious thought? For most of us, the meaning would equal a nightmare complete with ugly, mean drill sergeants, being surrounded by camouflage, and early mornings.

For some students though, the idea of military training in the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marines wasn't a job, or even an adventure. It was a purely enjoyable dream. Senior Jason Willits admitted that he has always wanted to be in the Air Force. "I've always wanted to be in the Air Force. I've liked planes and the military sort of life for many years.

That military sort of life which some of us would cringe at started for the future soldiers sometime after graduation, and before the end of summer. First comes the rigourous conditioning in basic training, then a placement in a base somewhere in the world. From there, it's lots of travel and excitement, or some things a little less exotic and fun.

With the rising tension around the world, the threat of war frightened the people staying behind more than the future soldiers. "I am so worried about my buddy, but he doesn't seem to be too upset. I guess it's okay if that's what he really wants to do," said junior Jenny Gorden.

From the students point of view, enlisting was a scary decision. That was the reason why the armed forces put men who are senior top performers in the important job of recruiting. Ted Anderson, Navy Councelor 1st Class, thought that the armed forces was a good choice for some students. He felt that the advantages were most important. "It's two fold. First, for the opportunities to pick up educational benefits to continue their education, and to give them training and EXPERIENCE so that they will be prepared to enter the civilian job market.

So, the quest was granted. The armed forces charged you to:

1) Be all that you can be.
2) Live the adventure.
3) Become one of the few, the proud.

But, most of all, they wanted to offer you some of that experience that they weren't asking for in the first place, but were willing to give. By Teresa Cowherd

Secret Pals help boost spirit

Suspension, excitment, and fun were just a few things that went along with being a secret pal. Secret pals helped to encourage spirit throughout the year.

Unlike football and basketball secret pals, the secret pals for the band were picked amoung each other. According to band instructor, Mr. Brian Lackey the names of band participants were put in a hat and then the students drew from that hat. Mr. Lackey said, "The band buddy system basically started six years ago. Secret pals do special things for each other to get one another fired up for the games on Friday."

What made secret pals so special was the fact that they went out of their way to do nice things for the football and basketball players.

Secret pal activities included bringing treats to the players on Friday, decorating their lockers, sending them a kind message, and making them a scrapebook that was presented to them at the banquet held at the end of the season.

Senior Kim Wilson said, "Being a secret pal is a good way for the underclassmen to get to know the upperclassman. Secret pals are also a good way to boost the football and basketball player's spirit."

Anyone could be a secret pal. The only requirements were that you attended meetings, kept a scrapebook, and remembered to bring in your treats on Friday's. Can you keep a secret? Well, keeping the name of your secret pal was important.

"It was so much fun to see the surprised look on their faces at the banquet when they discovered who their secret pal was," remembered Susan Tooms, junior. After all, it wasn't called SECRET pals for nothing!

Ever-famous lunch gives students a break

After hours of keeping busy by reading, writing and doing arithmatic, students, along with the faculty, deserved a break. This break was the ever-famous lunch. Seriously, life as it was known would not have been the same without lunch.

From chicken and mashed potatoes to Little Dabbie snake cakes, students had a wide and healthy variety to choose from to fill up those rumbling stomaches. But the cafeteria was not only used for eating. During lunch one could hear just about any king of gossip between friends, and some last minute studying was not unknown.

Is it possible that the lunch break could have been taken for granted? Remember back in junior high where getting out of the chair was a sin! "With the freedom we have here, I can relax and take a breather before heading back to class, instead of feeling stared at by junior high monitors," exclaimed sophomore Sara Tenan.

Although there were not many complaints about lunch, many students shared junior Sean Schubert's request of an open campus so students could go out for lunch. "A Big Mac attack is hard to fulfill with Warren's lunches. There are so many fast food restaurants around here that it would be easy to get there and back in half an hour," said Sean.

Whether it was grabbing a bite to eat, gossiping, cramming for a test, or just relaxing, lunch may have just been one of the best parts of the student's day.

Moments not too soon forgotten

Oh my Gosh. . . I can not believe I just did that. . . I am so embarrassed! Saying something to this effect happens to everyone at least once in their lifetime. Embarrassing moments. . they are a common thing to every ordinary person.

Even though some occurred back in elementary school, other happened just a few years ago in junior high. Jennifer Rott, junior said, "When I was in the 8th grade, our school had a magic show and the magician needed ten volunteers for his next trick, however, they had to be boys and I did not hear him mention that small detail. I sat there with my hand in the air, hoping he would pick me. I thought I saw him point to me and say, 'You in the blue sweater.' I had on a blue sweater, but so did the boy behind me. So I got up on stage thinking I had been chosen and when I got up in front of my entire 8th grade class, the magician nicely told me, 'This trick is for boy volunteers only.' I had to get down off that stage and go back to my seat while the entire audience laughed."

Whether it was dropping a tray in the 5th grade or tripping up the steps in the 12th, during a student's educational career some sort of embarrassment has happen to them. Eventhough it might have felt as if the best thing in the world to do at that time was to crawl away and hide in a corner, just remember the one that laughs last, laughs best.

Lockers: A home away from home

Ever had one of those days that appeared so dull and dreary that it seemed like it was a bad idea to even get out of bed? Well, like the old saying goes, "Little things mean a lot!" Instead of opening a dark and dismal locker to start off the day, many students found that decorating their lockers in bright and sometimes bizarre ways helped to put them in a good mood.

Walking down the hallowed halls, one could have seen anything from pictures of gorgeous guys or girls to colorful wads of used gum.

Junior Jenny Miles said, "Decorating your locker makes it not so dull and much more interesting."

But for those who cannot do without a touch of home, a locker was a place to keep things dear to the heart. "It (the locker) is like a home away from home. I keep anything I need to freshen up, such as hairspray and make-up, but I still make it look interesting andd cheery. I think the way a locker looks is a definite symbol of someone's personality, " said Ann Kettery, junior.

But why should the inside of a locker have to been the only thing to brighten the day? It was not uncommon to see a vividly decorated locker for someone's birthday or an athlete preparing for a game.

Whether it was a poster of Tom Cruise or Spuds Mackenzie, locker decorations add variety and color to brighten up the day. By Mandy Maddox

Cable TV becomes popular

Did Cosby fade? Not totally, but let's face it, My Two Dads, It's a Different World, A Full House, and lets not forget the famous ALF, took a big leap in the television world.

New shows come and go, but the question was, did the public television stations have fair competition with the cable channels? Were kids watching more cable than public stations or vice versia? Some looked at it this way, was it more interesting to watch a rated R movie instead of a movie that shared events that occurrred in everyone's lives?

Junior Jenny Miles said, "Cable gives a variety of things to watch, from comedies to dramas. You can always find something to watch on it on a Sunday afternoon."

More and more new shows came on television, but cable shows were shown over and over again. Heck, we could probably have lived without cable because of the shows that the public television stations were showing.

"Cable shows too many of the same shows over and over again," said Chris Lester, sophomore.

As our scheduals got busier, the television shows became shorter. But no matter how busy students got, or the more problems they had most of them always enjoyed sitting down and being able to laugh at the problems that teenagers had on the famous television shows.

Warren's rock bands perform

"Today's rock bands are a model for the rock bands of the future." This was a dream that many of the rock band-hopefuls at Warren Central fully believed. Many bands at Warren Central looked forward to trying out for the variety show. If they made the show, it was an excellent chance for them to show their stuff in front of a packed Performing Arts Center.

Many bands had a unique chane to play at under twenty-one clubs, such as the Sherwoood and Oliver's. If they became good enough they could have performed at parties or even have became a main act at one of these clubs. Two bands that strove toward this goal were S.O.V. and Mirage.

Many professional performers were role modles for Warren's rock bands. Favorite role model for rappers were L.L. Cool J. and The Beastie Boys. Buddy Holly and Richie Valenz influenced those who liked to play the fabulous oldies. While Whitney Houston and Tiffany became idols of the top ten singers of Warren. For the punkers and skaters, the favorites included The Dead Milkmen and GBH. Thrashers liked to follow the speed metal crunch of Metallica and Megadeth. Finally, those guitar virtuoso-hopefuls always kept Steve Vai of the David Lee Roth band and the late Randy Rhodes of old Ozzie Osborne fame in mind.

Above all, these bands enjoyed the spotlight they received from their peers and always hoped for their big break.

Nothing to do on Friday? Downtown exciting, fun

The weekend was upon you and you knew what that meant? Two days of all play and no work.

But just what was there to do with all that play-time? The usual Friday and Saturday night football and basketball games didn't seem that exciting? How about a movie? The only trouble with that idea was that no one could decide on which movie to see. Time was beginning to run out and Mom wanted an answer other than ... "Just hanging around." Suddenly an idea hit you like a bolt of lightning-Downtown Indy.

Since the renovation of Monument Circle and Union Station, kids began congregating downtown to just "hang around". From all over Indianapolis kids cruised up and down Meridian Street to meet old and new friends alike. Senior Alyce Overton said, "It's fun to go downtown and meet all kinds of new people."

But even the cold winds of winter couldn't stop teens from flocking downtown to "hang out." To most, the warmth of Union Station was appeasing to the body. However, some prefered to face the cold by ice skating on the Circle.

Finally, Downtown Indy gave teens another choice for something to do on the weekends.

Students look forward to summertime

Summer break!!! The time to relax, or the time to work, or the time to go on family vacations, or the time to go back to school.

Getting out of school for summer break was something every student (especially seniors) looked forward to. Sun, warm weather, going barefoot, and long lazy days were here again! Or were they? Many students did other things over the summer.

Relaxing at home wasn't for everyone. Some people always were going somewhere. Scott Norman, sophomore, went to Sarasota, Florida for 10 days with a friend's family. "I had a lot of fun with my friend relaxing in Florida," said Scott.

Angie Weaver, junior, spent most of her summer working. She worked between 24 and 34 hours a week at Kaybee Toy & Hobby. "I like working in a toy store, and I really like the money," she said.

Family vacations were always fun, right? Not so for junior Jodi Fields, who spent a week in a cabin in Wisconsin with her mother, sister, brother-in-law, two nephews, and a neice. "I almost went crazy trapped there for a week!" said Jodi.

Other students went to summer school. Junior Julie Reno opted to do this. She took U.S. History so she could "have room in my schedule for what I wanted to take in the regular year."

Wherever students were during the summer, it felt great to be out of school!!

A Bit of Fun

Classes, camps fill time

Summertime. Summertime. Endless days. Endless nights. That time of the year when you ask yourself as you're lying by the pool, "What am I going to do for these next 86 days?" The answers to this question vary from working, shopping, getting tan, or going to summer school. Summer school?! Are these people crazy?! Not quite.

Various summer classes and programs were available for every level of student. Some students tried to get ahead and lighten their next year's work load by earning an extra credit . Other students chose to retake a previously failed course before the next year began. History and government were just two of the courses that were offered. Also, drivers education was available for those students who were at least 16 years old and ready to hit the pavement. This course provided students with a knowledge of driving both in the classroom and in the car. One benefit of taking this course was receiving a waiver for getting high grades in driving. This meant that the dreaded driving test at the local license branch was not necessary.

Senior Elizabeth Leo attended the aerospace seminar at Indiana Stata University. In July she attended two weeks of college-level classes, earned two 2 hour college credits, and learned about something that she loves—airplanes! "I wasn't really doing much over the summer. By attending this, I got away from home, met new friends, and learned a lot about aerospace," said Elizabeth. Plus, the college atmosphere provided a good learning environment . She added, "I even got to use a light simulator! We had a lot more advanced learning opportunities."

Also, certain honors programs were available for students who excel in specific fields of study. In order to be selected for these programs, students must be recommended and fill out an application. In some instances, students with high SAT scores were especially encouraged to attend.

Senior Abby Beall was chosen to attend a two week Spanish Seminar at Indiana State University. Abby said, "I really enjoy Spanish, and it looked like fun. I also wanted to prepare myself for the Pan-Am Games since I was going to be a runner-translator in the athletes' village." However, she did not attend brain-draining classes 24 hours a day. "We had dances and a casino night," added Abby.

When the yearbook editors attended the Ball State University journalism workshop, I remember the learning experiences, late-night assignments, new friends, unair-conditioned dorm rooms, and one stormy night. On this particular night, we had to run across the campus in a very heavy thunderstorm while sections of the dorm roof were flying out of the sky!

Learning experiences, new friends, college life, and lots of fun. Summer school and summer camps provide students with a different taste of summer. Some people may think of it as " all work and no play." Obviously these people have never attended any of these events!

A Bit of Us

Fashion from head to toe

But just what exactly were the newest fashions for that matter? At the top of the list for girls seemed to be hair bows in all different sizes, colors and designs. Beside bows to help pull back the hair were colored stretchy ponytail holders that ran between 5 and 10 cents. Moving on down the list, girls enjoyed wearing cropped sweaters year round accented with mini skirts that were coordinated with colored hose or scrunch socks. The newest and most recent fad to strike teenage gals seemed to be bubble skirts. These are skirts that have their ends tucked under to form a sort of bubble shape. Plaid, Tweed and Polk-a-dots were the "in" design this year for fabric.

At the bottom of the list were less important things like shoes. Flats and boots that lace up along with Buster Brown shoes (Campers if you prefere) seemed to be the most popular shoes. "Because you can wear Campers with just about everything, they are my favorite pair of shoes," said sophomore Kelli McGinley.

But what about the latest craze for guys? Easily enough the stone washed or acid look seemed to be the "in" look for most. Multi-colored suspenders and the every so popular black Reeboks or Diadora tennis shoes made any guys outfit complete.

Guys and gals both agreed that college sweatshirts with different Fraternity and Sorority names were a big hit. As was the messy moussed look in for hair styles.

So, whether you wore bows in your hair or black Reeboks on your feet, fashions definitely were exciting from head to toe.

Pets...just like one of the family

As the door opened, a small child ran in, nearly falling, burdened by the large bundle in his tiny arms. "Look, Mommy! Isn't he cute? Can I keep him, PLEASE? I promise to take care of him always!!"

Soon the parent weakened by her child's pleas and hopeful face, agreed to let her child keep the small pet.

This scene has been repaeted millions of times and will continue to be played out as long as children fall in love with animals.

Many students had animals that became a part of their family. They loved these pets as much as any of their siblings, and sometimes were much nicer to their furry friends.

Junior Mike Teel remembered his pet cat Cheech. "When we lived in Boston we had a large Victorian house. Cheech would always dive down the stairs. It was so cute."

Usually the pet a child asked for was no more than a cat, dog, or goldfish. But what about those more unusual ones-such as snakes or horses. How did kids thalk their parents into those kinds of animals?

Senior Jeff Gammon did not have any problem with his mom. "It was really Mom's decision. She had always had horses and liked them. So, she got a horse."

No matter what kind of animal, pets were an important part of many students lives.

Gossip.. fact or fiction?

"I heard it through the grapevine" was often used when telling about how one heard about the latest party, what happened in school that day, or even what was going to happen during the upcoming weekend. But what exactly is the grapevine? Is it a big tall plant that grows grapes? Of course not! It is the circulation of rumors, or even facts, by the student body.

How does the grapevine start? Junior Kathy Stephens said that "One person will hear something that interests them, such as a party, and they will tell another person and then the grapevine for that subject has started." She also said that if a person heard something bad about another person then the grapevine was also used to circulate the information.

"The grapevine at Warren isn't always good," commented senior Barry Bradley. "If someone were to hear something that wasn't true, and they told someone else the story, the person involved could get hurt."

Overall, the grapevine was very usefull to students at Warren Central. For that was how people found out about school, activities, and, of course, parties. By Sheryl Lamey

What really matters.. looks or personality?

Is the tall, dark, and handsome guy your type? Does a girl with blonde hair suit your fancy? What exactly does your ideal person look like? And what exactly is the personality of this ideal person?

"My ideal guy would be taller than I am,"commented junior Treena Thomas.She also said that he would have dark hair, either brown or green eyes, and he would be strong, both emotionally and physically. "That is important to me," she said.

Senior Barry Bradley's dream girl would have brown or green eyes. He also said that she would have "a mixture of blonde and brown hair".

Junior Sharon Mikels said that her dream guy would be about 6'2. She also said that he would have broad shoulders. "I like tall men with broad shoulders," she said. This dream man of hers would also have nice eyes, a dimple, and would be a year or two older. Sharon also said that she likes guys with strong cheekbones.

Ron Taylor, junior, said that his dream girlfriend would have long, medium brown hair, and she would also have small feet. He also said that "She has to be shorter than me." Ron would also like her to be either a year older or younger than he is.

Many people have different views of what their dream person would look like and how they would act. Some people like the tall, dark, and handsome type, while others go strictly on personality. By Sheryl Lamey

Stereotypes...just a label

Walking down the hall, a new student might have gotten lost in all the different stereotypes. These could have been the outrageous looks of the "skaters", "surf dudes", or "punk rockers"; the outstanding fashion of the "preps", "cliques", or the "in" crowd; the fashionable attire of the blue jean jackets, long hair, and concert t-shirts, which were usually associated hoods; or the taped glasses, pocket protectors, and the Trapper Keeper from 3rd grade, which seemed to be the neccessary equipment of the "nerds".

"I believe everyone has a right to their opinion, but I also believe that everyone should be open-minded and give other people a chance. If people stereotype me that means that they are not willing to accept new ideas. I hope that everyone accepts me for WHO I am, not what I wear or the music I listen to," said junior Heather Borrego.

People were not always classified by what they wore, but by what they were envolved in or did at school. For example, the "jocks", the "cheerleaders", and the people in the band were most often described in derogatory statements.

"As soon as you walk into the school, you are stereotyped. People should give you a chance to show yourself. Someone could be really nice and have label as a "punker". This means the "preps", "jocks", "hoods", and "nerds" would shun them. No one should be judged by the way they appear to be," said junior Tammy Anderson.

Feelings like these were felt by many. Dave Allen, junior, seemed to have the right idea when he said, "I think all people are neat." By Cindy Thais

PIECE OF the Action

After school, with all the studying that had to be done, and after leisure activities and the time spent with friends, how much time was left? What else was there to do? The answer for many students was sports. Some people were not athletically inclined, but for those who were, Warren Central offered 10 boys' sporting events and eight girls' events. These ranged from fall sports to spring sports, from wrestling to swimming. Whatever the sport, it involved lots of competition.

Warren Central has had a history of great athletic teams. Boys' Basketball made it to regionals, Girls' Gymnastics went to state, and a few years ago the football team won state two years in a row. The tradition of excellence carried through to sports, too. For those students who did not want to be on an athletic team, intramural sports took place. Volleyball and basketball were held after school, and there was quite a competition going.

Whatever the sport was, there was one to match each person's individual interests. Without each team member, the team would not be complete. Every person and every team member contributed to make himself and his team a Piece of the Action.

Rebuilding season ends in sectional win

Overcoming early season problems of lack of experience and line changes, the '87 Varsity Volleyball team came out on top. With only three seniors and eight juniors on the Varsity squad, this could have been called a rebuilding season, but nobody needed that excuse.

"We have a lot of potential but we're going to have to work hard to develope it," said Coach Barbra Guhl.

Coming off last years record of 12-12, the Lady Warriors wanted to come out of this season on top, and they captured both the County and the Sectional titles. They were then beaten in Regionals by a very strong Roncecccalli team.

"The team played consistently through sectionals which is what we needed," said Coach Guhl. Junior Neki Mason added that, "We needed to play one of our best games, but instead we fell apart."

According to Coach Guhl, this team had at least one distinct advantage over past years teams: The members were not only teammates but also friends.

One disappointment for this year's team was that the stands were filled with mostly parents and away team fans. "We need fans as much as other sports do. If we support them they should also support us," said Junior Adrea Cabone.

Senior Alyce Overton was named to First All County Team and to Second All Metro. She also was voted Most Valuable Player for the '87 season. Lee Ann McGinley was voted Mental Attitude and Lori Macy was Most Improved. Best Defensive Player was Keenya Warner, while Jennifer Rott picked up the Golden Heart Award.

With eight Varsity players expected to return next year, the team shouldn't lack experience in its attempt to not only stay County and Sectional Champs, but to revenge its Regional loss. By Chris Daley

After winning its sectionals, the Warrior Cross Country Team was faced with some tough competition in the state tourney. It went on to bring respect back to Warren Central Cross Country.

Two-a-day practices were instilled before the county tournament so that Warren could repeat as Setional champs and place second in Regionals. The Warriors tied for third in the Marion County Tournament with some hard conditioning. This was one of the reasons for their success throughout the season.

"I am very happy with our season. To come away Sectional champs with only two returning players is quite an accomplishment. Our younger runners really came on strong," said Coach Joe Brooks.

Throughout the season, the cross country team put together some fine perfomances in Invitationals. Placing sixth at Pike out of 16 and fourth place out of 22 at Southeastway were among its finest moments.

Warren Central worked hard during the tournament by placing seventh out of 16 teams. Seven of the Warriors placed in the top fourteen spots, with senior Carl Long and junior Jim Bacon tying for first with their finger in the air displaying the number one sign. Bobby Sapp and Danny Duke joined Bacon and Long on the All-Sectional Team.

"We did a really good job at Sectionals," said Carl Long. "We have accomplished a lot of our goals this year, and when we needed it, everybody came through."

For most of the year the Warrior Cross Country Team was ranked 18th, but faced some tough competition late in the season to drop it out of the top 20.

"We improved greatly over the course of the year," said Coach Brooks. "We only had two of our runners on last year's varsity squad who had not competed on the varsity level before. This year was definitely a rebuilding one."

Jim Bacon and Carl Long were among the many fine runners that Warren possessed. Juniors Bobby Sapp and Mike Weir came on strong toward the end of the season. Also, seniors James Lott and All-Sectional runner Danny Duke helped Warren continue its winning ways.

Although Warren lost in the semi-state, it accomplished some goals that Coach Brooks would like to achieve again next year.

With four out of seven varsity runners returning from the j.v. squad, the future looks bright for Warren Central Cross Country for years to come. Next season could be one that Joe Brooks is looking for. By Todd Melloh

The 1987-88 girls cross-country team has had a season of firsts. The team, under the coaching of Mr. Woody Fox, won both the county and sectional tournaments for the first time in Warren Central history.

During the season the team ran extremely well against several tough opponents, some of which included a first place against Center Grove & Greenfield, a second place finish in the Maconaquah Invitational, as well as a first place finish against Franklin Central & Roncalli.

After winning Sectionals, the team qualified to compete in Regionals. There it finished in a fourth place tie with North Central. But, whenever a tie occurs in the playoffs, it is broken with the fastest sixth place runner for either team. In this case, the rule broke the tie between Warren and North Central, and gave the Panthers a narrow fourth place finish, advancing them to semi-state. The Warriors great season had finally ended.

After Regionals, Senior Brenda Ramsey said "This was definitely the hardest Regional meet in the state. As a team we ran well. Everyone did a good job at Regionals."

Senior Lisa Stahley added, "Our times were really good at Regionals. Before, we had averaged about 16 minutes for a 4000 meter (2.5 miles) run."

Next season the girls cross-country team should be as strong as ever, as only two of the nine runners on the Varsity Squad are seniors (Brenda Ramsey and Lisa Stahley). The Warren Central girls' cross-country program could be on its way to greatness.

Training hard
puts tennis team on top

All four Rocky movies, any "poor person beats rich person" movie of the week, and the 1987 Boy's Varsity Tennis season. What do these have in common? They all start out with a low point and end with the underdog on top.

After its first two meets, the Varsity squad had won only one match. Phillip Mirise and Brian Ramsey captured it by defeating Franklin Central's number two doubles team. After Rocky's first defeats he always trained harder and came out on top. So did the Warriors. Losing only three of their next ten meets, they proved themselves by easily besting last year's record of 4-7.

"Richmond was our best match of the year, because we played our best," said junior Bruce Stevens. Coach Mark Meier described the Richmond match as the highlight of the season.

Jim Runo was the number one singles player for the second year in a row. Second and third place singles spots were occupied by Todd Hillard and Bruce Stevens, respectively. Bob Baker and David Walesky made up the top doubles team, with Miriose and Ramsey filling out the Varsity squad.

There were initial fears about the reserve team because of a low turn out at tryouts. Coach Meier credits this to the fact that varsity positions were being filled by returning players. Things turned out good in the end though. "The reserve team has done extremely well. It is probably one of the best reserve teams that Warren has ever had," said Meier.

As Rocky 1-4 ended with the champ on top, and every poor-vs-rich movie of the week ends up with the poor eating caviar and the rich choking down some well-done crow, the 1987 Boy's Varsity Tennis Team ended up on top also.

Winning is a good word to describe the history of the entire Warren Central football program, and the junior varsity team is the stem from which these players blossom.

Both the varsity and junior varsity enjoyed fine seasons. The j.v. squad finished 6-2, with the two losses coming against Carmel and Howe.

Last season, the j.v. players had trouble with their first two games and looked rather sluggish. However, this year they were out to prove something. They wanted revenge against the Giants of Ben Davis. This year their wish came true. The Warriors won this one by a touchdown and then went to outscore the Golden Knights of Arlington. But, next came the Carmel Greyhounds. The Warriors went down in defeat to them for the second year in a row.

The next prey was North Central whom they defeated twice last year in as many trys. They also defeated the Panthers twice this year. The North Central frustration still continues.

Last year the Warriors met Cathedral for the first time in a long time, and they defeated them in a dog fight. This year, they traveled to Warren again, but this year they shut them out in a decisive victory 17-0.

The last game of the season came against a school that is familiar with defeating the Warriors this year. The Howe Hornets gave the j.v. squad its second loss of the season and still left that look of frustration on the players' faces.

"The team vastly improved since the beginning of the season. The attitude of all the players reflected their performance," said Tony Burchett.

Oustanding performances were turned in by David Batey, Tom Mills, Steve Beals, Joe Clevenger, Ryan White, Walt Ballinger, and Mike Hill. All of these players saw limited action on the varsity level.

Coach Harry Preston feels that these players will be the future Friday-nighters, "We (the coaching staff) feel that many members of this year's j.v. team will be ready for varsity action next year," he said.

"We lost some heartbreakers this year. The two games that we lost were really close, but our performance on the field, as well as off, was really good," said sophomore Brent Massey.

Practice pays off
with 8 Warrior wins

When looking back at this year's football season, most people think about the defeat by the Howe Hornets in the sectionals. But through all the controversy and hard work, the Warriors finished 8-2.

This year, like any other, started with the weight lifting and conditioning throughout the off season. But this was just the half of it. After the weight lifting session, the players went into a summer conditioning program. This consisted of running bleachers and sprints and jogging a mile in 90 degree heat.

The jamboree gave the players just a taste of what was coming up. They matched up with North Central. Their opponents were the Carmel Greyhounds and the Noblesville Millers. The Panthers and Warriors came out on top of this pre-season teaser.

The first game, like usual, was against Scecina, and it was, like always, a victory. But the Warrior team couldn't rest and savor this victory because "the game of the year was next."

Eventual 5A State Champions Ben Davis came into Warren Central Stadium hungry as a wolf for some revenge. The Warriors led 46 minutes of the game, but the lead switched hands with only 1:30 to play in regulation. The Giants capitalized on a controversial fourth down and one situation. Ben Davis drove down the field with no problem and managed to squeeze into the end zone to stun the Warriors 20-17.

"We used this game as a mental approach to every game that we were ahead," said senior John McElhiney.

Throughout the season, the Warriors survived through injuries and controversy at different positions. No injury was bigger than when Torrence Terrell and Austin Young went down late in the season. However, Todd Rutledge and Charles Wright filled in nicely for them. "The offensive line deserves a nice round of applause because they have done an excellent job opening holes for the running backs, and they gave time for our quarterbacks,"said Coach Jerry Stauffer.

Defense and special teams played one of the major parts in this year's success. The Warriors blocked several kicks and had two shutouts in this exciting year for football. "The special teams played an enormous part in our season because of their intensity and this in turn helped us stay successful," added Coach Stauffer.

Warren Central has survived through 50 years of hard times as well as glory days. These glory days continued through the next seven games as the team beat rivals and clobbered the 1986 3A state Champion Cathedral Irish 37-7 in the Warriors' homecoming.

When playoff time rolled around, the media was picking the Warriors to win their third state championship. The first playoff game saw the Warriors lock heads with the Wildcats from Lawrence North. Some turnovers late in the game helped the Warriors hold onto a narrow 21-17 victory.

Howe was their next and last stop. For the first time in eight weeks the Warrior football team felt the agony of defeat, but this time their was no tomorrow to fall back on. The Hornets squeeked out a victory 20-14, in the final minutes and shattered the Warrior's dreams of becoming two time 5A state champs.

Although Warren Central didn't advance out of sectionals, it had intensity and played with great emotion. Next year, there will be a new man at the helmwhen Jerry Stauffer resignes as head football coach and instead takes over as athletic director.

After many names were considered for the vacant head coaching job, the school board selected Larry Willen. He has been the defensive cordinator for quite some time.

"Five coaches have elected to stay. As head coach, I plan to stay with the defense," said Coach Willen.

Mr. Willen isn't interested in making a name for himself, but wants to continue the Warrior's winning ways. With the Warriors returning some key players on offense, as well as defense, maybe next year the Warren Central football squad won't make sectionals its last stop.

The 1987 Lady Warriors swim team had a slow start to its season but ended it by placing 6th at Sectionals.

The girls started off the season with a 2-7 record. The two wins were against Lebanon and Speedway. At the Columbus North relays, Warren placed ninth out of 15 teams.

The strongest swimmers this season were juniors Lori Carlson and Brenda Peters and senior Karie Hon.

Surprisingly, this season was not as impressive as last year's. Some reasons that were cited were that Carmel High School had an exceptionally strong team this year, making it difficult for Warren to advance to State.

There also seemed to be a lack of team unity, according to Hon. Hon also cited the loss of several high scoring seniors as a hinderance to the team.

However, several records were still broken. During Sectionals, Karie Hon broke two school records: one in the 200 meter Individual Medley and one in the 100 meter butterfly.

Again the swim team will suffer the loss of several seniors this year: Heather Roth, Lynn Wechsher, Bethany Nold, Kristian Harvey, Kim Young, Deanna Fox and Karie Hon will graduate. By Gabi Hon

After gaining varsity status in '85, the Warren Central Soccer Team has come a long way. The Warriors walked away with an a stonishing record of 15 wins, 2 ties, and 4 loses, while the junior varsity team finished the season with 9 wins, 4 ties, and 12 losses.

"This is probably one of the best teams, skill-wise, that I've ever coached," said Head Coach Gary Roberts.

Advancing to the "sweet sixteen", the Warriors were defeated by a score of 1-0 to the state champions the Carmel Greyhounds. "Talent wise, I figure that we were about even with Carmel," said Coach Roberts, "I just wish that we would have met them later on in the play offs."

"We could have taken state," added senior Darryl Folkening. "I think that we were as good as, if not better, than Carmel. We let down after they scored their goal. " After they put their goal in, we didn't go after them as hard as we had before they scored."

Although the team had a great season, it seemed as if the squad would be plagued by injuries at first. Five team members were sent to the hospital for injuries. Though with luck, every one came back with the exception of senior Chad Jeske who broke his arm while protecting the goal.

As for next year, Coach Roberts is hopeful. "We should have a really strong team next year," said Mr. Roberts. "22 players were on the varsity squad while the junior varsity team had 18 players with 12 of the varsity players graduating in May," she said.

State competition ends winning year

The sun is shining on the green grass and autumn leaves of a tranquil fall day just as the call "fore!" breaks the peaceful air. The 1987 girls' golf season is in session.

As the season started, the team was optimistic, but neither the team nor Coach Don Lukens really expected to go as far as they did. For the first time in Warren Central's history, the girls' golf team not only won County and were Sectional champions, but it went to State. Junior golfer Stacie Porter summed it up by saying, "The season was nothing but exciting. We were pleased with our performance, especially since we did not expect to do that well. Winning Sectionals and going to State gave us confidence for next year."

Ending up with a record of 11-2, with the only losses to Carmel and Decatur Central, the season can be labeled nothing but exceptional. Even though Carmel did not make it to State, the Lady Warriors suffered their worst defeat from the Greyhounds.

Winning County was considered the biggest victory because the ladies not only defeated North Central, the usual powerhouse in County, with a score of 398-403, but it gave the Warriors an unbeatable confidence for Sectionals. Teams that were astonished by the Warrior overthrow included Perry Meridian, Decatur Central, and Center Grove.

The astonishment of going to State was shared by all, except the weather. Driving through the cold and rain tested the girls' stamina, but they all did well. Scores were Kendra Travers-102, Stacie Porter-104, Stephanie Thompson-119, Jennifer Smartz-124, and Karyn Rosenbarger-139. Not only were the skies darkened with dark clouds, but so were the results when Noblesville defeated Warren, leaving the Lady Warriors with 14th place.

"As a whole, the team performed as well as could be expected throughout the season," said Stacie Porter, "I think we have a good chance next year to go to State, both as a team and individually. All we need is more players."

The Most Valuable Golfer was awarded to a sophomore, Kendra Travers, and the Mental Attitude Award went to Stacie Porter.

With practice over the summer and some luck, the team can set high goals . Could it be that the 1988 golf season could produce a State Championship?

1988 IHSAA Sectional Champions
1988 Marion County Champions
Ben Davis Invitational Champions
Perry Meridian Invitational Champs
Connersville 25-Team Invitational Champions
Tipton 8-Way Champions

The wrestlers. The grapplers. Those guys who hang out by the wrestling room. All of these terms apply to the Warren Central wrestlers, plus a few more like experienced, dynamic, powerful, and most of all successful.

The final record for the wrestling team was 17-0. This record doesn't include titles such as 1988 IHSAA Sectional Champions, 1988 Marion County Champions, Ben Davis Invitational Champions, Perry Meridian Invitational Champions, Connersville 25-Team Invitational Champions, and Tipton 8-Way Champions. The team also had one state champion, one state runner-up, and several sectional champions.

With all of this talent, the team definitely started out the year with high expectations but low fan support. Yet, the Warriors, who were started out the season ranked third in the state, went on to shine. As the season progressed, the the number of fans grew with the number of victories. Senior wrestler Trent Pruitt commented, "This year we've had a lot of support from the fans. I think this motivates us, and helps us in close matches."

Midway through the season, the wrestlers were doing great, and won the Connersville 25-Team Invitational. This was a high point for the team, because they wrestled against some future Sectional and State competitors. Junior Rob Walke placed it at the top of his list of meets because, "We wrestled our best right before Sectionals, especially at Connersville. We won the biggest tourney in the state, besides State itself."

Though their county opponents were also strong teams, the wrestlers made a good show and pulled off a county championship. They then went on to Regionals and had nine wrestlers compete. Dusty Hacker, Jeff Tribue, Brian Duncan, Scott McDaniel, Rob Walke, Trent Pruitt, Tom Collins, Rick Bacon, and Jim Bowman all wrestled well in Regionals.

Later in the season, four wrestlers advanced to State. Junior Rob Walke won the state championship in the 140-pound division. Rick Bacon was the state runner up for the second year in a row in the 171-pound division. Brian Duncan (130 pounds) and Trent Pruit t(145 pounds) both wrestled well but did not place in State. Warren ended their season with a sixth place in State.

After the season was over, all that was left was to look ahead to the next year and more chances for the team to excell. State champ Rob Walke commented, "Next year I think that we have the potential to be a state championship team, and if we work hard enough, we could definitely achieve this." Maybe next year, the wrestlers can add State Champions to the list of adjectives that describes them.

Youth and talent takes team to regionals

"Close, but no cigar," is a good phrase to describe the 1987-88 boys basketball season. But the way it ended was something special.

After losing its first two games of the season, the team pulled itself together to put on a nice showing throughout the year.

Carmel, Bloomington South, Ben Davis and 12 other opponents went down to Warren Central.

January 29, 1988 was a glorious night to remember. The Warriors traveled to meet the red- hot Carmel Greyhounds, and at the time they were ranked in the top 20 in the state. The Carmel arena was rockin' with thousands of screaming fans for this long-time rival game.

Despite the unbearable crowd noise, the Warriors ran away with this game in fashionable style, 72-55.

However, this year was filled with other exciting games also. Who can ever forget the heart breaker to Lawrence North. Both teams displayed some intense performances, but it was the Wildcats who came out on top in overtime 68-65

"In order for us to win some of these close ones we must come into every game mentally prepared because these teams are out to beat us now. Other teams are finally respecting us as a basketball team," said Coach Gary Jacob.

But after a few more games it came time for "Hoosier Hysteria" to kick in around the state. Franklin Central again was the sight for Sectionals. The Warriors became, after beating Roncalli and then defeating the host Flashes, seven-time sectional champs (six out of last seven years).

Bringing home their fifth straight sectional title wasn't as hard as their next accomplishment would be. The Warriors met the upset king Chatard in the opening round of one of the hardest regionals in the state. Warren decided it was their turn to shatter someone else's dreams in the final seconds.

The lead see-sawed back and forth throughout the game and when it came down to crunch time, it was the Warriors delivering the final blow. They were down by one point with three seconds to play and Greg Graham was at the line for one and one.

Greg had ice water pouring through his veins. The junior displayed some cool under fire techniques that left a smile on the Warriors' face. He hit both free throws from the charity stripe that gave the Warriors the lead and the victory that they had worked so hard for. Warren 65, Chatard 64.

"I will remember those free throws for a long time because not only did thay help us win, but that lifted the team and myself above everyone that night," said Greg Graham.

County power and long- time rival Ben Davis was next on the Warriors list. These two teams also battled to a nail biter. But the balanced scoring from the Giants helped give them the lead for good. Greg Graham fouled out after hitting two three-pointers to bring the game within striking distance.

But the red hot Giants held on and went onto win their first ever Regional title. Ben Davis advanced to the Semi-State Championship game, but lost to the eventual State Champ Muncie Central.

"The inexperience played a big part in some of our losses, but this year's playing time will be a big plus for us in the near future. The whole year we didn't play with the same consistency," said Coach Jacob.

Coach Jacob won't have to worry about senior leadership next year. The team will have returning five potential senior starters.

Maybe the Warriors can "piece it together" this year and not let Hinkle be their last stop. "In the upcoming year, I hope we can improve our record, play more games in the County and advance farther in the state tournament. The seniors did a fine job for us this year. We are going to have a good nucleus for the 1988-89 year, now all we have to do is build around it," added Mr. Jacob.

Winning attitude
pays off for young team

Winning isn't necessarily the key to a good season; character and personality count also. According to Coach Sue Parrish, the players this year were "fun, personality-plus type players, and a great bunch of gals to work with."

With only three players having previous experience, the Lady Warriors knew they were going to have a difficut season. "Our season was going slow at first, but we gradually improved," explained sophomore Lori Macy. They started the season off with a number of losses; however, their efforts did not go unrewarded, for they started to win many of their games.

Senior Krista Caldwell, and Juniors Leslie Leavell and Stacie Porter were the three star players. Stacie usually scored in double figures each game, and that's what the team needed from her. Leslie played exceptionally well towards the end of the season. "Once we got close to Sectionals, I began to play well," explained Leslie. Next year, Coach Parrish hopes Leslie will be half of the "twin towers" with the other half being Shannon Fountain. Although Krista injured her knee half way through the season, the rest of the team was able to complete the season with an overall record of 6-12.

There is quite a bit of hope for next year's team. Coach Parrish is looking forward to working with a "more aggressive, better, all-round shooting team, and a much more intense defense."

The junior varsity squad started the season with hopes of avenging last year's record, which stood at 5-12. Coached by Barbara Guhl, the team was able to accomplish this goal by boosting its record to seven victories and only nine loses.

State competition highlight for swimmers

Excitement! Disapointment! Anticipation! Victory! The boys' swim team offered all this and more during the 1987-88 season. They started off slow, but toward the end, the boys began to show the competition what Warrior Pride is all about.

With only four returning seniors, the team was hardly a power, but despite this drawback, the boys gave it their all and performed well in sectionals and state competition.

The season ended with a 2-11 record. Although the record wasn't impressive, individual times were improved. Records were broken on the personal level, and a few school records were bettered.

The years' two victories were against Shelbyville High School and Lawrence Central High School.

The returning seniors were Todd Root, Roy Graham, Craig Emmons, and Scott Cummings.

"This was the last year of my swimming career, and it is kind of sad that it's over," said one-year returning letterman, senior Todd Root.

Head Coach Con Keller and Assistant Coach Jim Cable led the team. "I think that the boys did well this year," commented Coach Keller. "I knew we weren't going to be real strong but we improved quite a bit from the begining," he said. Coach Keller later described the team as "a young team," referring primarily to the fact that there were only four returning seniors.

The 1987-88 season was Mr. Cable's last year to coach the boys' swim team. He wants to primarily focus on the girls swim team, of which he is the head coach.

Sectional competition ended victoriously for many of the swimmers. Senior Craig Emmons made a brilliant showing at sectional competition. He swam butterfly and topped his record by more than four seconds.

Chad Lawerence, freshman, Chad Keller, junior, and Kent Clark, junior, all advanced to state competition from Warren Central. The team beat out Beech Grove, Lawerence Central, Lawerence North, Pike, and Franklin Central at sectional competition, which was held at the Warren pool.

The three Warren swimmers that advanced to the state competition, which was held at the I.U. Natatorium, represented the team and Warren Central well. Anderson High School came out on top in the 1988 state battle.

One of the highlights of the season was the strong forthcoming of the underclassmen on the team. Chad Keller, Chad Lawerence, Steve Upfalt, and David Waleski were among the strongest sophomores and juniors.

2nd	Regionals

Flipping, jumping, and vaulting is the name of the game, and the 1987-88 gymnastics team played to win. The gymnasts won meet after meet, proving that winning was what they did best. With excellent coaching done by Mrs. Lou Ann Schwenn and Mrs. Sally Pankratz, the team finished the season with an overall record of 35-3 and a record of 9-0 through sectionals.

Determination, having a positive attitude, and working hard helped the team stay on the top of the competition throughout the entire season. Junior Julie Mayer said "it took a lot of hard work to stay in shape. There were five practices a week for almost three hours, and in that time we were constantly moving and doing tricks."

Although this year's gymnastics team was defeated in Regionals, three girls qualified for the State meet. Cathy Couch earned this honor by placing first in the floor exercise, and second on the vault. Tina Meyer earned her spot by placing first on the balance beam, third on the floor exercise and the vault, and second overall, while Julie Mayer got her spot by placing fourth on the bars.

Karen Walker said "at Regionals this year, the whole team competed beautifully. We were defeated by the defending champions, but knowing that we did our best helped cushion our defeat and the end of a winning season."

Each member on the team had a high quality of talent and skill. Karen Walker received the team award for being the Hardest Worker while Tina Meyer received the award for best on the Balance Beam. Julie Mayer received the award for best on the Bars.

Cathy Couch received the award for being the best on the vault, the floor exercise, having the best Mental Attitude, as well as being awarded Most Valuable Player. Cathy Couch also had two more awards to add to her list: 1st place in State for the floor exercise and also Best Mental Attitude for the entire state of Indiana.

Considering what she liked most about the gymnasts, the first thing that came to Coach Schwenn's mind was their personalities. She explained "that even though they were all different, they were a great bunch to work with." Assistant Coach Pankratz said that "the girls are extremely hard workers which usually made my job easier." Both of the coaches enjoyed working with the gymnasts and are looking forward to working with next year's team.

Although the team will be losing Cathy Couch, an all-round outstanding gymnast, there is no doubt in anyone's mind that next year's team will be just as good as this year's team. According to Coach Schwenn, most of the girl's from the team will be attending camp over the summer, so she feels that "next year's team will be as good as, or maybe even better than they were this year."

Young runners
face stiff competition

The Boys' Track team started out the season with three losses, to Southport, Ben Davis, and Richmond. However, their winning potential was shown by their one-point loss at Richmond. Next, at the Eastside Invitational, the runners placed 4th out of eight teams. Then, in the Madison Heights Invitational, the team placed third.

One of the reasons for the team's slow start was the lack of experience of some members. With only five seniors on the team, nine juniors, and 17 sophomores, Head Coach Dean Carbone commented, "It really went very well, for such a young group of kids. Next year, 26 of them will be back."

The team's schedule was very tough because many of its opponents were Top 20 teams. Some of Warren's tough competitors were Gary Hall in the discus, Chris Beckwith, the leading returning sprinter, and Carl Long.

Assistant Coach Joe Brooks said, "Gary O'Connor and Dan Herrick are two very promising athletes who are only juniors. Dan should be one of the top seeds in the county."

In a year or two, according to Coach Carbone, the team should be very good because of its age and outstanding newcomers, such as Demetrius Spencer, Jim Ellis, Eric Washington, and Tim Hutchinson. Strong competition also should help toughen the team up, he said. By Jennifer Eley

The Girls' Track team ended the season with an outstanding record and performances from the runners. With a record of 11 wins and 2 losses, the season was one of the best ever.

"The only thing that hurt our team was our inconsistency and a few injuries," said Coach Rodney Clark. Preparation for the season began in February with weight workouts and, of course, running. Areas of strength were distance, hurdles, and middle distance, saod Assistant Coach Woody Fox.

Beginning the season with a win against Lawrence Central, 64-9, the team then proceeded to beat a succession of teams, including Franklin Central and Howe. Top runners were Keenya Warner, Resee Harrison, Trenaye Brown, Gail Dick, and Lisa Stahly.

Next year, the team will lose three seniors, including Mays, Britt, and Stahly. "We're only losing three, and we still have many strong runners. If we continue to work hard, we'll be pretty tough to beat next year," said Coach Clark.

Outstanding performances were given by Shannon Fountain-400 meter dash, Keenya Warner-300 hurdles, Lisa Stahly-3200, and Gail Dick-800.

Sophomore Cheryl Bellamy said, "After the first meet, we were more confident, but I knew that we still had a long way to go to get back in shape."

Positive attitude
helps build team strength

Although six of the girls' varsity tennis team players had never played varsity before, the team worked hard to make progress and become stronger. That left only one player with varsity experience, senior Kris Rosenstein. Coach Beth Wolff said, " The team had a lot of desire to win even though they were inexperienced."

Finishing the regular season with a 4-10 record, the team members worked hard throughout the season to improve upon their weaknesses and enhance their strengths. Coach Wolff said that their strengths were consistency, attitude, and coachability.

Showing that their strengths could pay off, the team defeated New Palestine and Howe. Also becoming victims to the Lady Warriors were Scecina and Arlington, who were defeated 5-0.

However, these strengths could not help the team during the County tournament. In the first round, Lawrence North defeated the Lady Warriors, 4-1. First singles player, junior Natalie Frymier said, "We just didn't have the experience. We were mostly playing experienced varsity players."

Despite this, the team did fare better at Sectionals. It soundly defeated Beech Grove in the first round 4-1. After that, the team met Cathedral, considered a heavyweight power. Defeated 4-1, the Lady Warriors finished their season.

Junior Andrea Carbone summed up the season by saying,"It has been a lot of fun being on the team this year because everyone works really hard and has a positive attitude. By Kathy Lester

"Neither sleet, nor snow, nor rain...." That old saying could apply to the boys' golf team if scalding temperatures and gusty winds were added.

Finishing the season with a 7-7 record and an overall record of 33-24, not much seemed to hold the Warriors back. Having a four-year returning letterman, senior Rick Norman, along with several returning players including senior Randy Lukens, the team seemed to be headed toward success.

Although their individual games do have many strong points, Coach Gary Jacob said that the players weaknesses lay mostly in consistency. "We're really not very consistent. We play well one day but not the next," he added.

Despite the fact that the team average was exactly the same as last year's, senior Randy Lukens said, "We did a lot better overall in the tournaments."

As the season progressed, the team took an impressive third place in the county. The Warriors also had a good showing at sectionals, bringing home a fifth place.

Although the team lost two leading seniors, Randy Lukens and Rick Norman, several returning lettermen should help to make next season a winning one, also. By Tracey Beard

Strong hitting takes team to regionals

Baseball. It is rumored to be as all-American as Yankee Doodle and apple pie. It might seem as if everyone has the fever for baseball. Warren is no exception.

Beginning the season, the Warriors won their first couple of games with impressive wins. After the doubleheader victory at Michigan City Marquette, Coach Don Foreman said, "It's good to start off in a positive way."

Strong hitting was an aspect that the team relied on heavily. Senior Gregg McConnell said, "Our strengths would have to be how well we produce offense." This batting ability was led by seniors Brett Dye, Brian Ramsey, and Gregg McConnell.

Also, the coaching staff had a lot to do with the successful season. Senior Brett Dye said, "The coaches worked extremely hard putting players in different positions, trying to find nine players that would work good together."

But all was not without some losses. A disappointing loss came in the first round of the county tournament. At first, the Warriors took the lead, but ranked Decatur Central went on to win the game. Coach Foreman said, "The boys played a good game. They just couldn't get the final out." He also added," They were hitting the ball where we weren't; you can't catch home runs."

As the players looked toward sectionals, senior Brian Ramsey said, "Our concentration and intensity will have to increase. If this happens, things will fall in place."

After successfully defeating Beech Grove in the first round of the sectionals, the Warriors went on to beat Lawrence North and claim the sectional title. However, the Warrior warpath was stopped short in the first game of regional play with a loss to New Palestine.

Throughout the season, Warrior baseball's strong points began to outnumber the faults. With an overall record of 16 wins and 13 losses and a sectional victory, the team made a good showing. By Tracey Beard

Rebuilding year ends with state ranking

With a strong team, a good record, and a ranking of 8th in the State, the Varsity Softball Team members hoped to win County. However, their hopes were not a reality when North Central beat them 13-1. Since this was the worst defeat of the season, and the Warriors beat the team earlier, it was a big disappointment.

For the test of the season, few disappointments occurred. Before county, the team had a 6-1 record, losing only to Pendleton Heights. Said junior Cara Condrey, "We played pretty well, but we needed more games together and more experience as a team."

Coach Dave Stroud was pleased with the season. He said, "We were definitely in a rebuilding year, with only two returning players from the year before. " The team made it to the Regional competition, where it lost again to North Central, 9-1.

Starting with an early-season record of 4-1 and consistently winning more games, the Junior Varsity Softball team did well under new Head Coach Stacey Rathbun. Its only loss in the beginning was to North Central.

Strong points for the team were cooperation, both in and out of the game. "We played well as a team. We were balanced, and had a good attitude, " said sophomore Stacy Kaucher.

Key team members were Jill Horton, Cris Schulz, Stacy Kaucher, and Kelli McGinley. With a good record and strong returning players, the Junior Varsity Softball team hopes for a great next year. By Jennifer Eley

Winning fever
strikes Warrior athletes

The Warren Central athletic program had a strong year in 1987-1988. Many of the Warrior teams had very impressive seasons and advanced into post season with the potential to win state in their respective sports. At times, this potential fell short, and some teams were also dealt the agony of defeat.

The girls gymnastics team was highly ranked throughout the season, and for a short time it topped the polls. Misfortune struck the team when it had to compete against the number one team in the state, Connersville, in regionals instead of for the state championship. It came in second, but with a very high point total of over 105.

Senior Cathy Couch said, " I feel that any team recieving over 105 points should go the state meet as a team, but it was too bad for the members that did not make the meet and worked hard all year." Coach Lou Anne Schwenn commented, " I am very proud of the girls, and they did everything we asked them to do."

The Warrior Basketball team also had a very promising regular season, beating some state ranked teams like Bloomington South and Carmel. It also had a crushing defeat to highly ranked Lawrence North in overtime. In spite of the successful regular season, the Warriors ran into a buzz-saw against Ben Davis in the finals of the regionals. Warren students should be happy to know that three starters : all-regional team member Chris Talley, 2nd all-county member Ron Bayless, and 1st team all-county member Greg Graham, will all return next year.

The wrestlers ended their season with a perfect 17-0 record and a 2nd place in the regular season poll. They did exceptionally well in sectionals, qualifying all but two wrestlers for regionals. At regionals, only half qualified for state, and with one state champion, Rob Walke, the team placed 6th in the state. Coach Carman Hurley was not really disappointed. He said,"The guys are irreplaceable. I thank them for their tremendous contribution to the Warren Central Wrestling program."

The girls golf team and the boys swimming team also enjoyed successful season, along with other Warren Central teams this year. The student body was fortunate to see some very talented atheletes in action this year. Next year with some hard work there could be a lot of celebrating.

PIECE BY Piece

Sophomores who first came to Warren thought it was huge. There were so many people, and so many halls and classes. Many thought, "How will I ever get to know all these people?" But, as the year went on, those large classes and long halls proved to be the place to meet people. Whether a class had all a student's friends in it or not was not problem.

Seniors, juniors, and sophomores mingled and became friends despite their age differences. Plenty of activities occurred for students of all classes and ages, and at each of these new friendships were made. Soon those multitudes of bodies and faces came out of a blur and started to be recognized. By the senior year, students knew many, if not all, of their class and several of the underclassmen.

Without the people, a school would be just an empty building with many rooms, for it is the people who make the school. After graduating, it is not the classes that are remembered, but the people Without every one of them, the school would not function. Each person, each piece of his life, and each activity that he participated in all came together with others. But in the beginning, students found it easier to just take it Piece by Piece. By Jennifer Eley

The daily grind... not easy to avoid

Ho hum, another day... yeah, it is 6 am and my alarm is continuing to go off... for some reason the snooze button has decided to be stubborn today.

Hark, I hear my mother coming down the hallway. (I truly love the woman, but in the wee hours of the morning I find it extremely difficult to be sociable.) The same thing happens every morning. I can predict my mother's next move. She'll walk into my room, flip on the light switch, smile at me, and enthusiastically inform me that I have an hour to get ready for school.

Ah, here she comes... there goes the light (does she not realize that is murder on the eyes?). Oh no, there's the smile (how can she be so cheerful at 6 o'clock in the morning?). And guess what? My mother has just informed me that I have an hour to get ready for school. Oh, sometimes life can just be to predictable.

I have found that a little variety in one's life can be as uplifting as the taking of your daily Flinstone's Vitamin. For instance, wouldn't it make for a memorable morning if I woke my mother up the same way she wakes me up? (I wonder how she feels about blinding light at 6 o'clock in the morning?) How about trying to confuse her by sleeping on the couch?

Oh well, if all else fails you still have one thing to look forward to... your mother's smiling face!

SLANG EXPRESSIONS have been used by young people for centuries. Graphic by Sean Apple

Slang tells it today

Favorite slang expressions that are used today are what's up, chill out, why you playin, you get a treatment, dud, I thought you knew, oops what did I say that for?, and kill it. Kids use slang as a means of being cool and to fit in with the crowd.

Besides, why go through all of the hastle of asking some one what they have been up to, when one can simply say what's been up? Other examples of expressions that can be used instead of the ordinarily proper grammer are: just chillin, be easy, I ain't the one, kill that noise, I'm hip, make me know it, and you are defeating the purpose.

Slang exprressions have been around for years. As the years go by, each expression gives way to a new one, but basically the meaning remains the same. When people use slang, they are usually not trying to avoid proper speech; it's just the "in" thing to do.

Slang is really not a very big deal anymore because kids figure that if everyone else is using it why shouldn't they. Because there is always a time and place for everything, a person would not go to a job interview and ask the employer what's up?, or he most likely would not get the job.

Today, all kids want is a way that they may express themselves, and by using such expressions they feel that they are able to communicate with others in their own way. Who knows how slang got started? Each culture has its own way of communicating.

Who cares where slang came from? It is popular; it is hip, and it is definitely here to stay. Sorry English teachers, but slang is something that all kids have picked up on and will always use while they are outside of the classroom and probably inside as well.

The costs add up!

We finally made it! We're seniors! One more year! This is great! It's the best time of our lives! (Or so it has been said.) There isn't a care or worry in the world, unless you start adding up the many costs of being a Senior.

The long-awaited senior year begins with the usual book rental fee. What is this extra $11? Cap and gown fee! Costs are already beginning, and it is only August! We still have eight more months!

As the year progresses, the costs of being a senior quickly add up. The infamous Saturday morning test, appropriately called the SAT, must be taken by students who plan to attend college, for a mere $12.

When the process of filling out college applications begins, each application requires an application fee ranging from $15 to $50.

Next, everything from Senior keys and class rings to graduation announcements and name cards are sold for seemingly reasonable prices. And don't forget the price of your Senior pictures. This cost can add up, especially if there are a lot of open hands waiting for a special picture of their favorite senior.

Whew! Is that it? Not quite. During the week before graduation, the annual Senior banquet is held. At this event, lucky seniors can receive one of the sometimes humorous "most likely" awards and an evening of fun. All of this is not free. Also, graduation itself can increase senior costs. This includes a new outfit (you've gotta look your best!) and a reception after the ceremony for family and friends.

There, the year is finally over! We actually made it! We made it through the hard classes, the boring classes, the lunchroom antics, the sporting events, and even the costs of being a senior. By Tracey Beard

Traditions live on

Warren Central is chock full of little traditions that are passed down every year:

1. Senior guys always dating sophomore girls (This is an injustice to all of those fun junior and senior girls, not to mention the sophomore guys.)
2. Senioritis (Also see junioritis, and sophomore jitters.)
3. Fluorescent green stickers on the old windshield (I know that not one person will claim to these awful things, but I do agree that the teacher parking isn't that well marked.)
4. A big turnout for the game against Carmel (no matter what the weather, or the sport)
5. Sophomores begging upperclassmen for a ride to school (Being humble does beat riding the Super Twinkie.)
6. The usual lunch-period fire alarm (during sub-degree temperatures, of course)
7. A reward for any information about who pulled the fire alarm during lunch on a day with sub-degree temperatures
8. Seniors always winning the yell contest (and every other for that matter) during the pep rallies
9. Forgetting the combination to your locker over Christmas Break, and then after waiting in line for about three hours, finding that you were only one number off
10. The whole school panicking together at the Warren library during the dreaded term paper time
11. These same people who become great friends while suffering through a term paper being out for blood when it comes to the card catalogue

Yes, this is just a beginning of the things that have become "traditions" here. Now, the underclassmen can do their best to continue these travesties of good taste and justice. Without tradition, it just wouldn't be Warren Central. By Ann Polden

Tests...unavoidable

TESTS. TESTS. Tests. There is no way to avoid them no matter what students do. Some of the tests are easy; some are hard. But what makes a test interesting is how much effort needs to be put into it to pass.

In a test, a student could be asked to fill in the blank, to choose the correct answer out of a multiple choice, to write an essay answer, or to tell which of the following are true and which are false, and on and on.

The truly sadistic teacher loves true and false because the student inevitably chooses wrong when he guesses.

This only feels like torture, compared to that famous essay question. English teachers are notorious for giving this type of test. They want to see if one was paying attention in class, plus they like to watch students sweat. Of course one has to use such things as a good topic sentence, five to eight supporting statements, and that great concluding statement.

The utimate is fill in the blank. It seems that the teacher likes these questions because it requires the student to remember such trivial facts as what time of day it was when a murder took place. Of course the answer has to be correct to the last word or digit. They almost never give partial credit.

A favorite answer sheet is Scantron. If the student doesn't know the answer, then he can guess, or be really creative and draw pictures by connecting the dots.

No matter how one tries to aviod tests, it's impossible because test are an everday occurrence in the life of a student. Get use to them because one is bound to take tests for the rest of his life, whether it be one of the above or something even more ominous like the state drivers' test, or the SAT, or and army entrance exam. TESTS and more TESTS. By Thomas Johnson

Underclass guide

One of the biggest events of a high school student's life is that step from underclassman to top of the totem pole, or better known to most as, seniorhood...that one year of your life when you will positively think that you know everything there is to know. (Of course you do!)

But, wouldn't it be nice to have help in taking that step. Following is a list of everything that you, as an underclassman, will need to know to make it as a senior. (Remember, a senior wrote this, so how could it be wrong?)

Guidelines for Underclassmen

1) Cop an attitude and the correct walk

2) Take hard classes the first two years so you can take it easy during your senior year

3) Dog sophomores - always!

4) Never let them see you sweat

5) Pretend to have early release even if you don't

6) Have upperclass friends to get rides and protection from

7) Be prepared to get dogged at pep sessions

8) Start saving now so you can afford to go on a Spring Break vacation

9) Save your money to buy a senior's help with your term paper

10) Study hard now because you won't later

11) Learn how to say "no" to peer pressure

12) No matter how you feel about graduation, never let them know you really don't want to graduate and leave everything behind that you have spent the last three years of your life complaining about

13) Kick back and enjoy because the real world will be here before you know it!!

TAKING A DIFFERENT approach to learning, students in Mr. Dennis McNulty's physics class launch a softball out of a hand-made catapult. Photo by Todd Taulman

'Different' classes make learning fun

Sometimes, school seems to last forever. Students go to six classes a day and for six hours get lectured. It's the same thing all the time. But a few classes have adventurous programs and projects to add a little spice to learning.

In the Great Books classes, Mr. Richard Reed and Mr. Steve Comiskey held an archaeology project. It involved going to different teachers and asking for "artifacts," which were pieces of paper with part of a story (in a foreign language) on them. Once all the pieces were fit together like a puzzle, they then had to be translated to English. The project was to give an idea of how archaeologists really "dig" for facts.

The International Relations classes held a mock trial on apartheid. The trial, lasting all day, showed some of the racial tensions between blacks and whites in South Africa. Eventually, most people were on the anti-apartheid side.

Being a parent was a subject tackled by the Family Living classes. The students had to carry around a "baby," which was actually a raw egg, for a week. They were to keep it with them everywhere they went, to teach them how hard it is to be a parent. Students even had the options of naming and dressing their babies.

Whatever the class, teachers found ways to add excitement to teaching, and hopefully, to learning.

I'm late because...

WHAT'S MY BEST EXCUSE? It's amazing how many excuses the average teenager can spontaneously think of when held at gunpoint by his parents. It seems that the highlight of a mother's weekend is to hear her child's excuse of why he is 45 minutes late arriving home from his Friday night adventures.

What to do in a situation like this? Well, try telling your parents that you experienced a minor case of amnesia and forgot where you lived. It might work, but in case it doesn't, continue to other options.

This could be beneficial to the advancement of your social life. Keep in mind that if you continue to be late without an excuse, life as you know it may no longer be reality.

Now, I know that we have all experienced being late to school. In many cases, those little white tardy passes become a daily part of your life. The best part of the entire experience is the privilege of filling out the "report of tardy" slip. (Oh boy!) You are asked to fill in your name, date and reason for tardiness (???). (This is the time to really get creative).

A good excuse for being late to school could be that you wanted to make sure that ESPN was actually a 24-hour station. You stayed up for 24 hours and naturally needed a nap; therefore, you slept right through your alarm and, needless to say, first hour.

Of course, if that doesn't work, you could tell the administrators that you mistook Washington Square for the school building and spent an hour walking around Sears trying to find your government room.

A little imagination goes a long way. "But Mrs. Clark, I'm late because..." By Bernie Miller

'Dreamland' helps destroy boredom

"Today class we are going to study about tropical rainforests," says the teacher. The class moans. The teacher begins, while the students try to figure a way to amuse themselves during the monitone lecture. Being bored in class is something all students face at one time or another.

However, there are several ways to avoid boredom in the classroom. While on the subject of "tropical", one might daydream that he is on a tropical island with 10 beautiful women or men (depending on the sex of the daydreamer). Sipping tropical drinks and absorbing the rays in dreamland helps pass the time, but there is eventually a rude interruption by that annoying teacher.

If this doesn't succeed, try, try again. The girls have an advantage over boys because they can play with and split the ends of their hair. Although gentlemen do not have the advantage of destroying their hair follicles, they are adept at staredowns with the clock (usually losing) and dabbling in Picaso's field of doodling. These often-used methods usually result in many stars and circles on the fronts of notebooks.

Sometime during his school career, each student manages to develop his own unique method of combating boredom. If one is not careful, though, these habits can result in failure of the course and the loss of much-needed knowledge (of tropical rain forests).

My last thoughts...

Everyone always told me that my senior year would be the greatest. They told me how much fun I would have and how laid back school would seem.

Of course, I made the mistake of taking five academic classes which, in turn, became part of the hardest schedule I have ever had. I was also in the color guard section of the marching band. Needless to say, holding down a job was close to impossible.

My favorite saying of the time was, "Christmas break. I'll sleep then." Six hours of sleep for me was a good night. Don't get me wrong, you can do it. I lived through it, and my class rank even went up, but I didn't sleep over the break; I worked. Money is money, right?

Well, I have a lot of friends, a wonderful boyfriend, and I have found some motivation to work despite this growing sense of senioritis. I don't want to leave any of this behind. I admit my senior year has been great. I've had a lot of fun, and I've made a lot of friends. I went to Florida with all of my friends over spring break, and this is the year of my senior prom and my graduation.

I'm looked forward to it all, and graduation was a blast, but I know I will cry when it's all over. Senior year is fun, but it's sad too. Twelve years of your life are ending, and you're leaving people behind that you swear you'll never forget.

When you start your senior year next year or the year after, look for the fun, and make the most of it all. But don't forget the feelings (all of the ups and downs) and most of all, don't forget the people that make it all happen. After all, these are the best years of your life. By Karen Sigmond

Senioritis attacks without warning

It happens to everyone. There's no way to avoid it. Each year, it slowly creeps upon unsuspecting seniors. Yes, it's what teachers dread most of all: senioritis. Senioritis is really just another slang term for laziness, burn-out, and procrastination.

The symptoms are easy to spot. Most of the victims have dark circles under their eyes from a lack of sleep. Wrinkled clothes are a definite sign of the disease. Another sign is arriving at school within five minutes of the tardy bell.

Of course, teachers hate the symptom of putting off homework until the last minute or, even worse, just not doing it at all. But the true blue sign is the attitude of "I don't care; I'm a senior."

What is the cure for senioritis? Teachers and parents are always working on effective methods of getting rid of it.

They may think, "Well, after Spring Break, things will be better. The kids will have their chance to goof off then and get it out of their systems." On the contrary, a week of Spring Break (especially if the weather is warm) only makes seniors more impatient to get out of school.

It seems unlikely that a cure will be discovered in the next few years. However, until one is found, the dreaded "senioritis" will continue to wage war against unsuspecting parents and students. By Natalie Polston

Yearbook portraits capture memories

Senior pictures really look great. Flipping through the pages of the yearbook, one wonders how in the world every senior can look that good.

However, the actual process of getting senior pictures taken is not quite as glamourous as the final product appears. The average senior really prepares for pictures.

Sometime about April or May of the junior year he starts to think about whether he needs to grow hair out, color hair, or go on a diet before picture time finally rolls around.

Then of course, he forgets these plans until the assigned picture day comes in the mail. That day is always inconvenient, however, and the soonest reschedule date is usually sometime in October. By the time the big day arrives, most are frantically searching for just the right thing to wear and trying to cover up blemishes. Those great tans have all faded by now.

Smiling and posing for what seems like hours is not as easy as the famous models make it look. Even with all those poses and fifty-some pictures to choose from, a senior and his mom can never seem to agree on what pictures to order.

All that preparation and stress is worth it in the long run though. Everyone looks handsome or beautiful, and that special senior year is captured for a lifetime.

Ready for college

High school seniors tend to think of college as one great big party that never ends. Although college probably isn't all it's cracked up to be, it definitely gives seniors a lot to look forward to as they suffer through senioritis.

Freedom and independence are craved by seniors, and college life can certainly provide both. Curfews become a thing of the past when a senior steps foot on a college campus, and mom and dad are never going to know if he makes a habit of coming home at 4 a.m.

The drudgery of a monotonous routine for 12 straight years is a major complaint of seniors. The prospect of classes that change from day to day will be a welcome change of pace.

Greek life is another aspect of college life that seniors look forward to. For those that choose to "rush," the experiences will be unique and memorable. Fraternities and sororities can add excitement to social life.

The thought of having an entire month off at Christmas is mind-boggling to high school students. After final exams, though, college students probably need a month to recover! Many students might also need a chance to earn more spending money because they have spent their entire savings during first semester.

Late night pizza parties, missing class without having mom call in, and decorating a dorm room in a special way all hold exciting prospects for seniors. The most important things that seniors look forward to about college life, though, are meeting a lot of new people, making new friends, and experiencing a totally new and independent way of life.

The biggest 'test'

I remember the afternoon I got my driver's license...July 7, 1987, very vividly.

I had just finished a driver's education course about a week before, and I just couldn't wait for the holding period to go by after getting my permit.

It was hot outside, and I was nervous. I couldn't remember much except for some signs and which way to push the blinkers for left and right.

I was so nervous that I got nerve blisters on my hands driving to the test. Oh, how they hurt! Finally, my dad and I arrived at the license branch; we didn't have to wait long.

I got my eyes tested...I passed. I took my written exam...on a computer, and I only missed the minimum of two. Then came the moment of dread...the "mug shot"! My best smile didn't help; it was still a mug shot.

Once we were out of the building Dad offered to let me drive his car, but I declined because his car was... well, somedays it just had a mind of its own.

The best part of the whole experience was that Dad drove us to Dairy Queen for a "celebration" milkshake.

Then, the two of us headed home to show off my license.

Surviving the day

"Daily Dilemmas" begin even before you start your day. Waking up is one of the most difficult tasks of the daily routine. Who wants to face another day at school? Most teenagers do not.

While sitting at the kitchen table finishing your homework, you realize you have missed the bus, and you will be late to your first hour class. After you get to school, you remember you left your homework on the kitchen table.

After the first hour bell rings, you run into your best friend. She begins to tell you that your boyfriend is upset, because you did not show up at his locker. You whisper under your breath, "What else can go wrong?" Not a very wise choice of words because walking down the hall is your boyfriend with a look on his face that says. "Watch out; you're in for it."

You finally survive the day , and you remember you have to be at work after school. You just happen to have worn jeans and didn't bring your uniform.

You sit down to do your homework, and your book is in your locker at school. You decide to go to sleep and end these daily dilemmas. On the way to your room you say quietly to yourself, "Tomorrow has to be better."

Traditional rivals

Rivalries are something that usually go way back in time. When someone thinks of rivalries, he thinks of the great competiveness that lingers between two teams.

The atmosphere in a big ball game is one of the most exciting events that onewill ever witness. Whatever rivalry it might be, the one thing that they all have in common is tradition.

I.U. and Purdue is the most known rivalry in the state, but to others it is not the only one that matters.

Rivalries promote school spirit and get the fans more into the game. The hatred between the two schools seems to add something to the rivalry and makes it mean that much more to the players as well as the fans.

Rivalries are taken personally in many cases, and the one here at Warren is no different. The Warren Central and Carmel rivalry is probably the one that is taken most seriously.

A good wholesome rivalry really brings out the best in both teams, and to some people beating a rival makes the whole season seem worthwhile.

The reasoning behind some rivalries is unknown, but the fact remains that each and every rivalry is something special.

Summer dreams

There I am, driving by in my new Corvette (or maybe a Ferarri). The T-top is open, and my hair is blowing in the wind. It's a beautiful summer day, and I stop by the beach to talk to some girls. Maybe I'll go for a swim and....

"No, I'm sorry Marcus, the answer is Ernest Hemmingway not girls in bikinis."

Boy, sometimes my dreaming gets out of hand. The kind of cars I want aren't within my reach unless I rob a bank or something.

My friends and I are always playing around by saying something like: "Oh, I drive the ol' family truckster, because the Porsche is in the shop."

Only if I had a car to be in the shop in the first place, it would be so much better. Right now, I would settle for any car (well, almost any car) that I could get my hands on.

But, like most teenagers the most dreamed about cars are the most expensive. Some of these include Porsche, Ferarri, Trans Am, Firebird, and Camaro.

Even though these cars are a luxury, the regular beat up car takes you just as far as any high priced, fast speeding, brightly colored automobile. Obtaining this car would be a mircle to most, unless it is "The Family Car."

Caught napping

It's only third hour. Boy this day is going slow. I hope we see a film today. Oh no, not notes. I knew that I shouldn't have stayed up until twelve last night. Now I can barely keep my eyes open.

Maybe I can lay my head down. The guy in front of me is pretty tall. I'm not going to last much longer. I keep drifting off into space. He'll never notice if I just get a few z's in this hour. After all, it's only notes. I'll just copy them from someone else after school.

These desks are so uncomfortable. I wish I had a pass to the nurse. They have beds down there. If I got a couple hours sleep, I'd feel great

What? Me? Oh no, I don't know the answer. Whew, that was close; glad I was only dozing. Hopefully, he won't call on me anymore.

Now, where was I. Ah, sleep, but not for long. Can't get caught or I'll lose points off my grade and I've already lost 20. I really can't afford to lose any more.

Hey! Wake up!! Huh? You were snoring. Everyone's looking at me. I feel my face growing redder. Everyone's laughing at me. Great! There goes another 10 points.

Locker inspection

Come with us now on a journey into that shadowy world between light and darkness, a place neither here nor there that transcends the laws of time and space. No, we are not going to the Twilight Zone, we are going to your locker.

Every year, each student is issued one of these miniature closets to keep school paraphanelia in. But, lockers are more than a place to keep books. They can be a reflection of the person who owns them. Many people admit that the condition of their lockers is in direct proportion to the messiness in their room. "Mine has about three feet of trash just sitting in the bottom," confessed junior Gordon Reed. Some pretty repulsive things find their way into lockers: gym clothes, cans, bottles, food wrappers, partially eaten food, broken pencils, and monster wads of bubble gum. More common are posters of popular rock singers, bumper stickers, and pictures displaying the opposite sex.

Some original items that have made their way into lockers are portable stereos, Halloween masks, prizes from cereal boxes, pictures of cartoon characters, and sunglasses.

Lockers are just another way for people to express their individuality. By Mike Lafferty

Friday night fate

The dilemma that will last forever...what to do on a Friday night when you don't have a date.

It's very important that you be seen, but you can't look lonely. It's good to be with "the girls", and a few guys thrown in for good measure, so it doesn't look like you're looking to hard.

Some of the more popular things to do are to go to Washington Square, Warren games, or Noble Roman's. Those seem to be the places to go to see everyone you know.

Some of the more adventurous Warrenites venture their way out of the Township to meet new people. Very few people attempt this radical movement out of their specified area, however. When they do, one of the choice places to go is Oliver's, one of the hottest dance spots in Indy.

Broad Ripple is popular with the hard core scene, and a bowling alley (any bowling alley) is a good place to hang out. You don't need to know how to bowl; just try to look good doing it.

Although working on Friday night is usually a fate worse than death, on a dateless Friday night, it can be a live-saver. "Oh, I couldn't go out, I had to work," is the perfect excuse.

The absolute last choice for something to do is to stay home!

In on the action

The Student Advisory Board, chosen from the elementary, junior high, and high schools in Warren Township, meets on a monthly basis and was formed to enhance communications between students, staff, and the Board of Education.

The Student Advisory Board consists of one sixth grader from each elementary school, two freshman from both junior highs, and one junior and one senior from Warren Central.

Senior representative Uma Eller and junior represenative Sherri Belanger were selected through interviews of all interested Student Council members. Members were chosen through Student Council because if one is a member of student council, according to Principal Kenneth Brist, "he is a true representative of the school."

The junior representative is the only person guaranteed a spot on the next's years Student Advisory Board. That person will automatically move up to the spot of Senior Representative.

"I am getting a better understanding of how Warren operates through the Student Advisory Board," stated Sherri.

The Advisory Board gives insight to the school board on matters concerning students.

First date 'jitters'

It's 6:30 on a Friday night; you've got half an hour, and you're still not dressed! You've thought about tonight all week long, and now it's finally here. You've planned your outfit at least 1,000 times in the last few days and changed your mind 100 times in the last hour.

Now you've finally decided on the cute peach mini-skirt and sweater you originally picked out. You have done your hair five times and your make-up 10 times. The doorbell rings...it's only 6:58...you're not ready!! What are you so nervous about? It's your first date with somebody new!

Everybody gets a case of the jitters just before the big first date. What will you do? What will you say? Will you have anything in common? Well it's too late to worry about it now. You're both here and now and you have to go through with it. Will you have anything to talk about?

Finally, it's time to go home. Believe it or not, you actually had a nice time after all of that "getting ready."

All in all, it was fun, and you wouldn't mind doing it again sometime. So much for the promise you made to yourself that you would never get so upset about a first date again.

Let's go Warriors

It's tip-off time. The big game's finally come. But, what! Where are the fans, the cheers, and the excitement?

What has happened to school spirit? Sure, everyone goes to the football games, but how many people actually watch them? Many "fans" leave, not even knowing who won, or what the score was.

What about the less popular sports? How many students have been to a golf match or a cross country meet?

School spirit means wearing school colors, attending school activities, and backing any team or group representing the school. It means earning a letter jacket and attending pep sessions.

Today, many young people have other interests. With the growing cost of a college education and the desire to own a car, most students have jobs that take up most of their free time. They just do not have time to attend extra-curricular activities.

Those who can spare the time need to attend pep sessions, participate in school spirit days and chains, go to the games, concerts, and plays, wish the athletes, musicians, and actors good luck, and tell others to do the same.

School spirit can be a lot of fun! By Jill Horton and Mike Mitchell

Going for a dip

My other classes were required, but swimming in P.E. gave a new meaning to the word "work." On that horrible first day, I learned the fate that was to befall me for the next six weeks.

As I walked into the swimming locker room, the air grew more and more humid until the atmosphere just hung there. I paled and then wanted to throw up after reading all of these positive thinking posters on the walls. I took a swim suit; the choices were either too large or too small. (I took a small to avoid the diaster of having one fall off.)

I found in the next room a large hole. I was later informed this was the pool. It was cleaned only once, just to torture us poor students by burning our eyes out with excess chlorine. I knew I was in real trouble when the teacher said I couldn't have my rubber ducky. So, I drowned the best I could for six long, dreary weeks.

By a gift from God, I made it through the six weeks, and I only missed seven days. Of course, I only skipped twice; the rest were legitimate. I can now drown on my back and side, as well as lying down. As I ponder my experience, I try to concentrate on the only pleasant thing about this terrible class: in four years my sister will have to take it.

Front of the class

You're sitting in class, waiting for your turn to give your oral presentation. You look around. No way. There is no way you're going to ge able to get up in front of all these people and give a report about "Interspecies Communications Among Marine Mammals in a Captive Environment."

Oh no! The teacher is pointing to you. This is definitely a bad sign. Silence. It feels like an eternity. Finally you say in a low, almost inaudible voice, "Yes sir. I'm ready."

"Stand up," you tell yourself. "Legs, quit acting like jell-o, and walk!" Now then, the sooner you start, the sooner you finish; and the sooner you finish, the sooner you can swallow the huge mutant butterflies that have overrun you stomach.

Well, here goes. "Blah, blah, blah... Oh no! I'm lost. What line am I on? Great! I have no idea what to read next.

No matter how well-prepared and confident, each of us is familiar with sweaty palms and froggy throat that go along with public speaking. Teachers and parents tell us that giving a speech gets easier each time. They say that it just takes practice. I say it takes nerves of steel...and a promise to treat yourself to a huge hot fudge sunday if you survive.

No time to spare

BBRRIINNGG! "Great! Another Monday Morning! Between working and having fun, you forgot to do homework! Oh well, you figure you can borrow someone's work or play with the student teacher's mind until she thinks that she lost it.

Just then, your friend asks, "Did you do your essay?" Huh, oh! Just what you needed. After spending your free time at home and break time at work reading the book, you forgot to do the essay.

You're already on a first name basis with the nurse, so forget being sick. Budgeting time isn't like it used to be. Maybe a half hour of homework or so in junior high, but now you have chemical equations, geometric story problems, and term papers. You've had to cut down on work time, free time, and even sleep!

After getting the red out of your eyes with Visine and borrowing a pen, you start the essay. After about fifteen minutes it's done, but then you find out it is a fourth of your grade, so you add a few pages. You think, "this could only happen to a sophomore!" Ask any junior or senior and they will say you're right.

OOPS! That's the bell, and this is due next period! I'll say my pen ran out of ink, or I ran out of Vivarin, or.....

Tardy bell blues

THE SIX-MINUTE ADVENTURE (A DASH TO CLASS)

Fifteen more seconds,
By the clock on the wall,
Then the bell will ring,
I'll make a dash for the hall.

From one end of Warren,
To the Career Center of Walker,
A seemingly long journey,
And I must stop at my locker.

My, the halls are crowed.
Everyone walks so slow.
Doesn't anyone realize,
How far I must go?

Here it is; I found it,
My locker at last
Wait! What's my combination?
Come on think fast!

I fling my books in,
And yank my books out,
Slam the door with a bang,
And continue my route.

I run into class,
And jump in my chair.
The tardy bell rings,
The teacher gives me a glare.

The adventure is over.
I start to grin,
But I'm reminded in 55 minutes,
I'll start all over again.

Working overtime

Sometimes I think I should pack my suticase, grab my sleeping bag, and move into Warren Central. During the school year, I may have gone home at 2:45 p.m. 15 times at the very most. Band, (which starts in July) and gymnastics practices continue until after spring break. Most of the time, I'm ready to go to practice, but on some days, I just want to hop on the bus and go home. (If the bus driver remembers where I live.)

When the last bell rings, my heart jumps. Thoughts of coke and food come to mind. And then, Oh NO! Please say I don't have two and a half hours of practice before I can leave this building.

One of the worst days was when I went to gymnastics practice and then had danceline practice until 9:00 p.m. Just try to imagine spending 14 hours in the same place. There are only 24 hours in a day, which leaves 10 hours at home (seven to sleep). Why waste the ime and gas to drive back and forth?

Do you know how much money could be saved if I just lived here? I could put my sleeping bag on the gymnastic mats and sleep quite comfortably.

Of course, I'd have to bring a TV and a telephone. There is always time for my favorite shows and talking to friends.

Freshmen

Early entrance

For many Warren Central students high school days started in the freshman year, instead of spending the ninth grade at Creston or Stonybrook with the rest of their classmates.

As part of a special program, fresman were able to take vocational courses in the Walker Career Center as well as classes such as health, math, and English here in the high school building.

Also offered for ninth grade students was a special education program with individualized programs in smaller classes based on each student's own achievement level.

For those students who could not make the adjustment to the vocational program in the career center there was a Supported Employment Program. The Supportd Employment Program allowed the students to actually go to the job site and be trained by the teacher rather than by the employer.

Freshman were originally allowed to come to Warren Central because of overcrowding at Stonybrook and Creston Junior Highs.

Now that the problem with the two schools being overcrowded has ceased, there will be no ninth grade students attending Warren next year.

Top 10 teacher

Mrs. Beth Wolff, Spanish teacher, was awarded one of ten top spots as Top Teacher by Indianapolis Monthly in its April issue. Mrs. Wolff teaches both the language and the Spanish culture, and her techniques permit students to view themselves in different roles and experience new situations.

"Watching kids this age grow and change and experience new things," commented Mrs. Wolff in the magazine, "is one of the neatest things about teaching."

In her classroom, almost no English is spoken, and Spanish is carefully enunciated. Her classroom techniques offer a variety of options. Her students may make videos on imaginary trips to Spanish-speaking countries or create trivia games with questions on history, geography, and grammar.

Over Spring Break, Mrs. Wolff chaperoned 46 of her students on a week-long trip to the Carribean. Over the years, she has also taken students to such places as Mexico, Africa, and Europe.

Mrs. Wolff is also the creator of Project Set, Student Exploratory Teaching. This program attempts to attract high school students into the education profession, and it awards an annual scholarship to a deserving senior who plans to enter the field.

Common excuses

It is something that hits everyone during his time in school: forgotten homework.

You hear but ignore your teacher's reminder that the typed, double-spaced, 30-page term paper is due tomorrow.

Then seventh hour arrives the next day and with it your memory. In anguish you gaze down at your folder and begin to lose control. There is only one thing left to do: think up an excuse and fast.

To help them in their time of crises some Warren students have concocted excellent excuses.

"My grandmother is very sick and in the hospital. I thought it would be rude to read in front of her," said Linda Buschmeier.

An anonymous junior said, "The aliens came for their yearly visit and took me for a ride in their spaceship."

"I had to help my mom watch T.V." said Ray Milks.

Connie Hanson chose a more common approach, "It's in my other book."

"My sister was having a baby and in labor she had to squeeze my right hand, which is the hand I write with, so I couldn't do it," said a creative Kris Hanson.

Of course, you could always be honest. Nah.

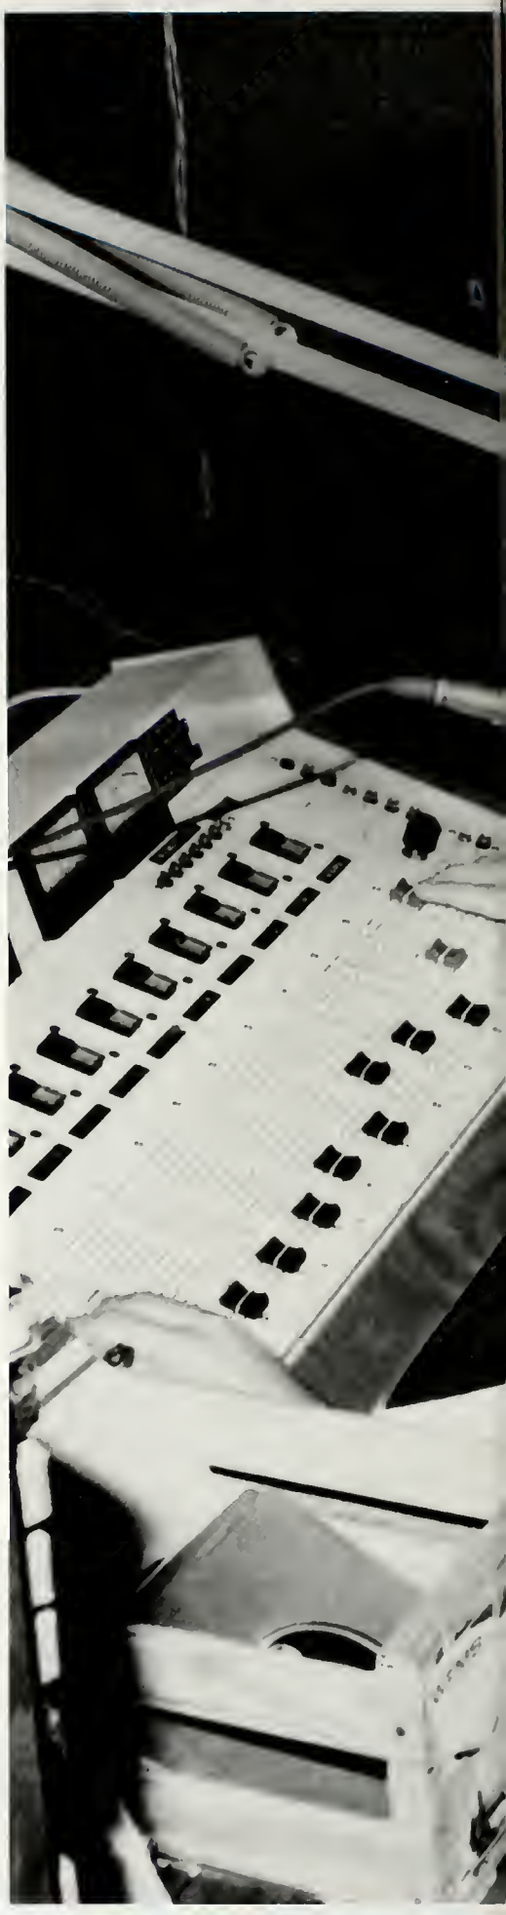
PIECING IT together



How do businesses get started? It takes money, time, and patience, as well as support from the community. In Warren Township, the many teenagers provided businesses with their patronage and purchasing power, which is estimated at over one million dollars per month.

Not only did students buy from these stores, but they also worked there. Many businesses such as McDonald's or Burger King had over 50 percent teenage employees. Working was not just a way to earn money. It was a way to meet people and gain job experience. True, minimum wage was only $3.35, but it was better than nothing.

Several employment opportunities existed. There were fast food places, clothing stores, department stores, and specialty stores. Each store made up the Warren Township community, and without any one of them some purchasing needs might not have been met. The teenage employee had to juggle school, work, and a social life, but it was done. Each of these elements made up an important part of life for the student, and each store was just a piece of the life around them. Businesses flourished, and students worked at Piecing It Together. By Jennifer Eley

If I were able to bestow blessings on those I love. I'd give you-

JUST ENOUGH.....

Money to protect you from real want.
Poverty to appreciate true wealth;
Stength for a life of full service,
Sickness to make you treasure your health.

Heartache enough to make you sympathetic with those less fotunate than you;
Loneliness to make you value your loved ones,
Enough love for sharing with those around you.

Enough vision to choose lofty goals,
Too much character to abandon them lightly,
Enough ambition to find a way of achieving them,
Enough goal attainment to maintain hope.

Enough challenge to make life exciting,
Enough security to prevent anxiety;
Enough troubles to test your resourcefulness,
Enough disappointments to keep you humble,
Enough good sense to acknowledge your failures,
Enough integrity to accept your best effort,
Enough self-esteem to keep you trying.

Pressure enough to keep you active,
Enough work to allow you to enjoy your leisure,
Time enough to notice the beauty around you,
Wisdom enough to appreciate it.

Enough curiosity to seek answers,
Enough wonder to make you worshipful
Enough concerns to cause you to pray,
Enough faith to give you confidence.

We put it together

As the end of the school year rolled around, everyone began to realize that at Warren the pieces definitely fit. Whether it was the sophomores and juniors going on interviews for summer jobs or the seniors saving money and preparing for life at college, at the end of May we all worked to make sure that the pieces fit over the summer.

For the 641 seniors, the pieces really began to fit when they headed to Market Square Arena for graduation ceremonies. At that time, most of them realized that high school was over and that the real world was directly ahead. Whether they were going off to college in the fall or starting in the world with a job, they all made sure that they were ready.

For most of Warren's 2,500 students, things began to fit when May arrived. For some, May meant making the honor roll or just getting their grades up. For the Warrior baseball team, it meant capturing the sectional title. For teachers, it meant cleaning up their rooms and getting ready for three relaxing months of vacation.

But no matter what we had planned, we all faced the end of school with anticipation for the summer months ahead. We knew that we had no choice but to finish Piecing it Together.

And all the pieces fit!

Colophon

Volume 51 of the Wigwam yearbook was prepared by the publications classes of Warren Central High School under the supervision of Mrs. Cathy Shoup, adviser.

Over 1,100 copies of the 1988 book were printed by Herff Jones Yearbooks at its plant in Marceline, Missouri, at a cost to the students of $18, $20, and $22. Larry Glaze served as company representative for the Wigwam staff, and Phyllis Forst was in-plant consultant.

The book was printed on 80-pound enamel paper. All body copy is 10-point Times, and all captions are 8-point Times. Each section contains its own specific headline style. All body copy, headlines, captions, and folios were set by the Wigwam staff members and adviser using Apple Macintosh computer equipment and Macwrite and Pagemaker computer programs.

The cover is four-color, with a design created by graphic artist Glenn Litts. The endsheet, opening, divider, and closing were designed by Tracey Beard, Jennifer Eley, and Kathy Lester, editors.

Portrait and group photographs were taken by Tower Studios, while candids were shot by Tower or staff photographers.

Warren Publications is a member of the Indiana High School Press Association, Columbia Scholastic Press Association, National Scholastic Press Association, and Quill and Scroll National Journalism Honorary.
